Boys Soccer: Banks 2, Seaside 0

Playing the first of two games in three days at the coast, the Banks Braves blanked Seaside 2-0 Tuesday night in a nonleague boys soccer game at Broadway Field.

It was the first game at the 3A level for the Braves, now a part of the special District 1-3A/2A/1A division, which includes Oregon Episcopal and former Cowapa League member Valley Catholic.

Banks held a 1-0 halftime lead in Tuesday's game, then scored in a scramble in front of the net off a corner kick just 2:08 into the second half.

The Gulls had the possession advantage in the final 40 minutes, but were unable to score in their two shots on goal. An attempt from 25 yards out by Kaden Burch sailed narrowly over the crossbar.

Seaside has three straight road games versus Milwaukie, Scappoose and Tillamook, before returning for six straight home games.

The Braves play Thursday at Astoria (5:30 p.m., CMH Field).

Volleyball: Seaside tops Warrenton in five sets

In a nonleague Clatsop Clash volleyball match Tuesday night at Warrenton, Seaside and the Warriors went the distance, with the Gulls winning in five sets.

After splitting the first two sets, Warrenton rallied to win Game 3, highlighted by a kill from Jamie Annatt off a set from London O'Brien at game point.

But that would be the final victory for the Warriors, as Seaside built a 13-8 lead in the fourth set following two ace serves from Kierra Gastelum.

An ace by Kiana Reeves made it 16-10, and a kill moments later from Alyssa Chen made it 17-11.

Warrenton rallied briefly, but the Gulls closed with a 7-0 run, capped by a kill from Aubrie Taylor for a 25-15 victory.

The Warriors held an early 3-1 lead in the deciding fifth set, but the rest of match belonged to Seaside, which reeled off 12 straight points behind the serving of Taylor Poole, helping the Gulls to an eventual 15-5 win.

Season opens with jamboree session

The Astorian

High school football teams unofficially opened the 2022 season Aug. 26, with numerous jamborees around the state.

Locally, Seaside hosted seven other teams for a two-hour jamboree at Broadway Field.

Amity, Astoria, Banks, Estacada, Ilwaco, Tillamook and Warrenton all took part.

All teams will suit up for the real thing this weekend.

Action starts Friday, when Seaside plays the first of seven home games when the Gulls host Henley (7 p.m.). Astoria hosts Banks in a nonleague game

(6 p.m. at CMH Field), while Santiam visits Knappa (7 p.m.), Jewell hosts Mapleton (7 p.m.), and Quilcene plays at Naselle (7 p.m.), as the Comets seek a return to the state championship game.

Warrenton plays Friday at Amity, and Ilwaco opens Saturday (2 p.m.) at North Beach.

Hood to Coast: 'This was the smoothest year we've ever had'

Former Seaside Chamber of Commerce CEO Brian Owen adopted a new role as a volunteer. Now the executive director of the Seaside Civic and Convention Center, he sold tickets at the beer garden.

"It's been such a great experience for the last seven years, being part of the chamber," he said. The volunteerism shown at Hood to Coast "is something that truly is in our makeup. When we live in Seaside, we volunteer, we give."

The Providence Cancer Institute has received more than $6 million to support cancer research, treatment and support services. This year's goal is to raise $650,000 for the institute.

Marin Munos of the volunteer-run nonprofit Girls on the Run, based in Portland, was one of several with booths and fundraising teams running in the event.

"We work with kiddos ages third through eighth grade in the Portland metro area and across Central Oregon," Munos said.

The organization focuses on noncompetitive athletics.

"The whole point of the program is working towards an attainable goal," she said. "Running, walking and competing in the 5K is what they're working for, to give them something that they can accomplish, work towards and gain their confidence."

Black Pink, a running team from Dallas, Texas, came up with 12 team members for their second Hood to Coast relay. Runner Gowa Borzigin called it the "ultimate experience."

Sarah Curtis came with a team from Stael Rives LLP, a law firm based in Portland. "We're exhausted but we had a wonderful time," she said at the finish line. "The weather was perfect. Nice and cool in the Coast Range — a little misty but perfect for running."

John Andazola came to Seaside with a team from Las Cruces, New Mexico, for their third Hood to Coast relay. "It's almost a tradition," he said.

Their team, the Organ Mountain Warriors, are named after the Organ Range in New Mexico.

He said of all the races they participate in, this is the biggest and most adventuresome. "I have to say, it's been the best organized, the best supported — there's people all over the area that are there to help. It's just been incredible."

Andy Bauer of the "Muu-Muu Crew" has run Hood to Coast nine times, and three times as a member of the crew.

"It was awesome," Bauer said. "There's always challenges. Then you run through them and then you wind up at the beach. It's really fun."

Eleven-hundred running teams and 400 walking teams each competed, Dan Floyd, chief operating officer of Hood to Coast, said.

According to police reports, there were no major incidents. Several traffic-related offenses took place throughout the day, including citations for failure to obey traffic devices, speeding, unsafe passing, careless driving and unlawful cell phone use.

At 1:30 p.m., a beachgoer accidentally dialed 911 while washing his hands. At 2:30 p.m., after a pocket dial from Hood to Coast, police could only hear "cheers of happiness," police reported and no emergency. Found property included a passport, which was recovered, and three lost phones, one of which was recovered to the owner and the others turned into the police.

"This was the smoothest year that we've ever had," Floyd said on Sunday. "There were no major injuries or issues. The city of Seaside was an amazing host. We're so thankful for the support of the community."
