The children's wading pool was covered and the lifeguard's chair looked as though it had short legs when high water covered the bank of the city swimming pool this month.

OIA says no to Goal 4, yes to forest dwellings

Oregonians in Action has written legislators urging them to ask members of the Land Conservation & Development Commission to scrap proposed changes to Forest Goal 4 as well as a recently funded research study they claim will be "void of all credibility."

There is more evidence that dwellings benefit rather than burden forest management, OIA asserted, citing statements by Les Wilkins, Administrative Forester for Times Mirror Land and Timber Company (formerly Publishers Paper Co.) that "It has been our experience that timberland dwellings of other (woodlot) owners intermingled with our ownership were a valuable management resource."

The group's objection to a $225,000 LCDC study of the impact of dwellings on forest and farm land was based on the contention that LCDC plans to impose more restrictions on dwellings before it starts the research project.

OIA is a statewide, non-profit and nonpartisan organization committed to reforming Oregon's land use regulatory system. Its address is P.O. Box 230637, Tigard, OR 97223. The phone number is 639-6891.
