

Free art and craft demos at library

In recent months, the Vernonia Society of Arts and Crafts has presented to the public a series of demonstrations and workshops: Doreen Buchan presented silver piercing, and gave a demonstration of the basics of the art. Louise Hamnett lead a workshop on creating beaded ornaments. Tracey Fletcher introduced rubber stamping and provided material for experimentation. All of these programs proved very enjoyable.

Now the Society has prevailed upon Doug Tesdal, popular art instructor in the local school system, to present a demonstration of the techniques of watercolor. Tesdal's presentation will be May 31 at 3:30 p.m. in the Margaret MacDonald Thiele Petti meeting room at the Vernonia Public Library.

The public is invited to enjoy this informative and entertaining demonstration. There is no charge.

Group seeking art works of wildlife for June show

"Extinct, Endangered and Forever," is the title for an art exhibit that will open June 1 with a First Thursday reception and continue through June 29 at the Gallery at Columbia Center. The center is at 375 S. 18th Street, St. Helens.

"All wildlife including flora and fauna that are extinct, endangered or that you think will never be endangered, are eligible," said Maeona Urban, chairwoman of the Columbia Center Art Committee. "Artwork displaying everything from dinosaurs to cockroaches is welcome."

The show is sponsored by Betsy Johnson.

Each artist may submit two pieces of artwork in any media for the show and sale. Two-dimensional works are not to exceed 28x36 inches framed, and three dimensional works may not exceed 50 pounds. The work must be original and completed within the last three years. Art must be wired and framed.

oversees the art program, receives a 20 percent commission on all works sold during the show.
