

Help protect the environment by not turning your trash into more

For every pound of product that is manufactured in the U.S., at least 32 pounds of waste are created. The largest generator of solid waste is industrial waste created during manufacturing, oil and gas production, and mining. Does this mean that the rest of us are off the hook? Does it matter what we throw away and what we recycle?

The benefits of recycling don't only come from keeping garbage out of landfills, but from replacing virgin materials with recycled materials in the production process. As consumers of recycled-content products and as suppliers of materials that become feedstock in the manufacture of new products, we reduce both industrial pollution and the demand for raw materials, like trees and oil.

Manufacturing with recycled materials almost always saves energy and water, and produces less air and water pollution than manufacturing using virgin resources. Aluminum, for example, can be recycled using less than 5 percent of the energy used to make the original product. Paper manufacturing with recycled paper instead of virgin wood not only reduces pollution, but cuts operating costs in our paper mills.

Recycling has its own environmental and health impacts resulting from the collection, processing, transport and re-manufacturing of recyclable materials. Yet, studies have shown that the environmental benefits of recycling are much greater than its burden. The more people participate in the County's recycling services, the more efficient and cost-effective recycling becomes.

Reducing the amount of materials we consume in the first place - and recycling whatever is left - protects our water and air quality, conserves virgin resources for future use, minimizes the impact manufacturing has on the environment, and provides valuable resources to industry. Columbia County currently pays to transport and throw away garbage to a landfill in McMinnville.

The Vernonia Transfer Station, behind the schools, accepts the following materials: aluminum cans, scrap metal, tin cans, milk jugs (plastic tubs and bottles are not accepted),

There is a $2 charge for any amount of recyclables. Tires and appliances are accepted for an additional fee. The station is open every second and fourth Saturday of the month from 10 :00 a.m. - 4:00 p.m. For more information on the transfer station, call Waste Management, at 366-2613.
