Fire season ended October 6, according to the Oregon Department of Forestry's Columbia Unit Office.

Burning is now regulated on a day-to-day basis by the local fire districts and the Oregon Department of Forestry. Permits are required for any open burning within Columbia County. The burning of domestic waste and yard debris requires a valid permit. For those outside of rural fire districts, the Department of Forestry issues the permits.

With the end of fire season, fire prevention, fire watch and fire suppression equipment requirements are lifted for forest workers.
