

Banks signs agreement for police services from Washington Co.

($151,088 for fiscal 2005-2006). Either party may terminate the agreement through a lengthy 120-day process. However, the city may terminate the agreement at any time in the event that funding is not available to fulfill the cities obligation. In addition to the officers, the county will provide all equipment necessary to provide services including vehicles. The city is required to provide a furnished office, including computers, and office supplies as needed. Deegan told council that insurance costs for next year would be dramatically reduced, by about $13,000, because liability insurance for police services is included in the contract.

Council created the office of police commissioner and appointed Branstetter to the position which will serve as liaison and agent in matters regarding the providing of police services. Council also adopted a resolution to disburse police department equipment. Four cars will be sold, with proceeds going towards offsetting the cost of contract services. One computer will be donated to the library, a laptop computer and projector will be transferred to the city for presentations, and a digital camera will go to the water department.

Lyda told council that he has continued his discussions with the Department of Justice concerning repayment of COPS grant money. City recorder Debra Deegan told council that the money was awarded and spent on police services. However, while the North Plains grant was for an established agency the Banks grant was for a start-up agency. Unfortunately, personnel administering the grant at the time did not realize that officers could not be transferred from North Plains to Banks at the same rate of pay. When officers were transferred, following the failure of a bond in North Plains, they were transferred at the same rate of pay which was higher than that allowed under the terms of the Banks grant.

Lyda proposed a five-year payment period beginning in December. He told council that this would allow council time to continue to seek other remedies. Pete Edison said, "It's ridiculous to repay a police services grant when the money was spent for community policing."

Tim Grossnickle, Public

Works supervisor, told council that well drilling was completed. At the time, council approved the base bid of $76,048, they also approved additional drilling to maximize water delivery. Council approved an additional $3,787 for drilling an additional 167 feet. The completed well delivered over 500 gallons per minute, exceeding the present well by 200 gallons per minute. The city will now be able to perfect the current well permit and obtain a water right of 300 gallons per minute at this location. Grossnickle told council that he does not expect water curtailment this year.

In other business council:

- Council approved an operating budget of $1,448,054 for the 2005-2006 fiscal year.

- Awarded a contract for landscape services in Greenville Park to Psalm 1 Landscape at a cost of $15,750.
