

Cooper of New Moon Llamas places in regional competition

Llamas have been a part of Don and Nancy Dailey's life for over 10 years. They own New Moon Llamas in Vernonia, where they breed a medium sized, diverse herd of domestic and imported llamas as well as owning a couple of alpaca geldings. They enjoy showing in both Halter and Performance class in Oregon and Washington.

Their two year-old male, King of Cooper Spur (Cooper) has consistently taken first place and in 2004 was named Grand Champion in his division. Last month in Regional competition in Albany against llamas from six western states, Cooper placed second in his division, which qualified him to go to the 2005 Grand Nationals in Lincoln, Nebraska, this month.

Unfortunately, time conflicts kept Cooper and the Daileys from going to Nationals.

Cooper and his sister will next compete in Roseburg in February.

The Dailey's regularly host groups of children from area pre-schools and schools who visit New Moon Llamas to learn about llamas and get the hands-on experience of feeding llamas.
