

Land use classes for those who wonder how it works

Ever wondered about local land-use planning and how it works? What's being done to make sure our communities are livable – now and in the future? What you can do to make a difference? Washington County's Department of Land Use and Transportation and Oregon State University's Citizen Participation Organizations (CPOs) are offering a six-part citizen education seminar on basic land use issues on the third Wednesday of each month from January through June 2006. The series will be free to the first 20 people who sign up to be in the studio audience. Presenters will be county and city staff along with a Metro Commissioner, a county Planning Commissioner, and a CPO leader. The sessions will be offered Wednesday evenings at 7:00 pm at TVC-TV Studio A, Arts and Communication Academy, 11375 SW Center St., Beaverton. The dates are:

 January 18: Oregon Planning History
 Feb. 15: The Development Process
 March 15: Citizens' Role in Planning

Park master planning to resume

 view the application and submit a recommendation to council. Council voted to engage American Legal to conduct codification of the city's ordinances. The process will cost approximately $9500 and will take 6-9 months to complete. Codification ensures that ordinances are consistent with each other and with state laws. Council also discussed resuming work on the Park Master Plan. City engineer LDC had started the project. They will be asked to present a price and time table for completing the plan at the next council meeting. Council had second readings of two ordinances and adopted them both. One was the comprehensive plan text amendment to update long term housing and residential land needs. The other was to establish a business license for non-profit organizations. They also passed a resolution setting a city fee schedule for such things as copies of documents, research and faxing. These fees have been in place, but there hadn't been a resolution providing for them.
