

Providence Regional Transcription office raises money for strays

The Regional Transcription office of Providence Health System does fundraising collections four times a year. Their most recent collection brought in $412 and supplies to help the Vernonia Police Department (VPD) with stray animals. The VPD holds stray animals until the owner picks them up or until Columbia County Animal Control can come up from St.

Helens to get the animal.

Supplies collected included such items as crates, leashes, collars, treats, water and food containers, toys and food. The Regional Transcription employees hope that these items will help make for more comfortable stays for stray animals in Vernonia.
