trainer and supervisor in Clackamas County, developing their first training manual and landmark map, helping to develop one of the nation's first emergency medical pre-arrival instruction programs, and initiating a law enforcement women's association. Jones served as President of the Board of Directors of Clackamas Women Services during the establishment of its first shelter for battered women and children. Jones was also a foster parent during this time.

From 1989-1990, Jones was appointed Executive Director of the Oregon Lifebelt Committee, responsible for coordinating the volunteer signature collection for Oregon's safety belt law, working with medical professionals and other traffic safety advocates. She and Dr. John Tongue were the campaign managers when the initiative qualified for the ballot and was successfully passed by Oregon voters. She then briefly worked with the National Highway Traffic Safety Association providing assistance to the traffic safety programs in the states of Massachusetts and Oklahoma.

Jones was hired as the first administrator of Columbia 9-1-1 Communications District in March of 1991. The District has seen activity levels quadruple since her arrival, and many changes made to address the needs of the county's citizens and public safety providers. She said, "I am very fortunate to work with a great team of people, dedicated to providing excellent service with common sense and using conservative resources. We have been able to accomplish much for our citizens and public safety partners. I am very grateful for the opportunity to work here."

Since coming to Columbia County, Jones has served as the first 9-1-1 representative on the Board of the Department of Public Safety Standards and Training (DPSST), appointed by Governor Barbara Roberts in 1993. She received the DPSST Loaned Executive Management Assistance award in 1996. Jones was a member of a group that developed the first critical incident debriefing program for dispatchers. She taught health and wellness at the DPSST Telecommunicator Basic Academy for 3 years. Jones was chair of the first state APCO-NENA awards committee from 1992-1995 and chair of the first APCO-NENA legislative committee from 1992 to present and 2004 APCO-NENA President. In 1993 she was elected to the Board of Directors of Special Districts Association of Oregon, was Board President from 1998-2000, and is now Chair of the Board of Trustees of Special Districts Insurance Services. She received a Distinguished President pin as 2005-6 President of the St. Helens Kiwanis Club. Jones is an active member of the Clatskanie United Methodist Church and lives outside of Rainier with her husband, Louis Jones.

"The messenger should be shot"

The councilor reports mostly had to deal with the resignation issue. Councilor Brett Costley vehemently said, "When the messenger is lying, the messenger deserves to be shot," apparently in reference to a statement made earlier in the meeting by Editor Rebecca McGaugh that, "Just because you don't like the message, doesn't mean you should shoot the messenger." Councilor Shirlee Daughtry said, "I hope when we leave here things will be a lot better. What happened here needed to be said but I hope it makes a difference. I've been hurt and ashamed by what's been happening."

The next council meeting will be November 5, at City Hall, starting at 7:00 p.m.
