

Scam uses Microsoft name on phone to try to get your money

Microsoft's website states, "We do not send unsolicited e-mail or make unsolicited phone calls to request personal or financial information or fix your computer."

Warning: Be wary of unsolicited calls.

• Confirm the problem: Never give personal or financial information to an unsolicited caller. If they claim to be from a specific entity, contact them using a trusted method and find out if there is a real issue. Don't download attachments or trust e-mail links.

• Don't agree to purchase over the phone: Ask for information in writing. Read the details and research the offer. If you still want to purchase, credit cards tend to have more protections than debit cards.

• Report fraudulent activity: Complaints can be filed with the Federal Trade Commission at www.ftc.gov. Internet and e-mail scams can be reported to the Internet Crime Complaint Center at www.ic3.gov. Complaints about a specific business can be filed at www.bbb.org.

Victims of the Microsoft phishing scam should contact trusted tech support to ensure their computer is protected. Make sure system updates, virus and spyware protection are current. Contact financial institutions and notify them of the possible identity theft to change account numbers and passwords. Monitor accounts for unexplained charges. Check credit reports on a yearly basis for free by visiting AnnualCreditReport.com.
