Bits & Bites

By Jacqueline Ramsay

Horror of Horrors – The Snowberry bushes are covered with snow-white berries and it is only August 10th. Too soon for a white Christmas. I can't believe seven months have faded into history. Where did they go? Have I gotten any smarter? Not really. Have I really accomplished some great deed I've been working at? No, all projects are still in the work stage. Have I gained any dry weight? No, and my clinic can't see why?

I awoke this morning at 4:00 a.m. I guess I got a chill; anyhow I couldn't go back to sleep so I rose, got a shot of cranberry juice and started knitting on the Ripple Afghan. Hook in hand – #1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, skip 2, then 1,2,3,4,5,6,7, 3 sts in 1, then repeat across, turn and repeat again and on I go – I now have only about 39,820 sts left. Yes, I take time out for nonsensical jabber once in a while – ho, ho.

Reading in the paper of the city council predicament. I know of one person I'd ask to come back in a heartbeat, but she has probably already said, "No, thank you."

I guess I'll stop my rambling and save pen and paper for another day. Read page 570 of a Good Book, or maybe it's page 808.

Pirate Festival, St. Helens

Climb aboard as the 6th annual Portland Pirate Festival sets sail for two exciting days of piratical fun and family adventure while we invade the historic waterfront of St. Helens. The Festival begins on Saturday, September 3, ends on Sunday, September 4, and features all of the fun and excitement it has become famous for, with the awesome addition of more access for boaters!

The new location in St Helens, (Portland's nearest escape and film location for the first Twilight movie) offers a variety of great changes to this staple NW festival, including a beautiful spot on the Columbia River, an Olde Towne setting and ample moorage for boats at the city docks and on Sand Island.

Other fun new events in 2011 will include the addition of Mermaid Lagoon; wild costume parades lead by The Last Regiment Drummers and The Oregon Defense Force Pipe Band; the comedy of Cap'n Chris the Hypnotist; Curtis Carlyle Seriously Funny Juggling, and the whip cracking Lefty Caress.

See www.portlandpiratefestival.com for more information.

24 Years Ago This Month

The August 27, 1987, issue of The Independent included the following news story on page 12:

Vernonia's long-neglected 2 hour parking ordinance will start being enforced, the city council decided this month.

A public hearing held last month elicited a consensus of those in attendance that the only parking problem was lack of enforcement of the ordinance.

The city is also going to repaint curbs in the downtown area so drivers can see where parking is legal and illegal. Motorists are reminded that it's illegal to park within 20' of an intersection.

Jaywalkers will also start being cited, Vernonia Police Chief Phil Jacobus said, because of two recent accidents when children were hit while crossing Bridge Street without going to crosswalks. Injuries were minor in both instances.

In other parking related decisions, the council rescinded the

No Parking regulation instituted last month on Park Drive, and changed it to limited parking.

Parking will now be prohibited there only during the regular hours the swimming pool is in operation. Park Drive is adjacent to the swimming pool.
