

Vernonia needs to change their water rates, says PW committee

by Jim Tierney and Dale Webb, Vernonia Public Works Committee members

The Vernonia Public Works Committee has been considering how to keep water and sewer rates as low as possible over the long haul. Like most things in life, saving money in the long run involves giving something up in the short run. So it is likely to be with our water and sewer rates in the near future. This is the first in a series of articles that your Public Works Committee proposes to publish to help the citizens understand the complexities that we and the City Council see as affecting future water and sewer rates.

This article is intended to give you some understanding of the city's complicated public works budget, and explain the need to set aside reserves to replace our aging water and sewer systems. In the next article, we'll explain the several ways different cities approach setting rates, together with an objective discussion of the underlying philosophies behind those rate setting strategies.

Responsible leaders in charge of any expensive facility typically set aside a reserve from the rates to replace the facility and its parts as they age and wear out. For most homeowners this might include setting aside $500 a year to replace the roof, or a similar amount to help pay for painting the house every 7 to 10 years. When your facilities are worth millions of dollars, this kind of prudence becomes even more important.

Historically, Vernonia's lead-
