Vernonia Veterinary has new employee

Lindsay Weller, Vernonia, is the newest staff member at the Vernonia Veterinary Clinic. Weller started at the clinic in mid-January and brings four years of experience working with animals at a large pet store. She loves, "expanding on what I learned at the pet store and learning about the medical side of what's going on with the animals." Weller greets both animals and humans with a great happy smile.

Weller, who moved to Vernonia when she married Mark Weller nine months ago, met her husband at church services in Beaverton.

Vernonia Veterinary Clinic is open Mondays, Wednesdays and Saturdays from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. at 700 Weed Avenue. Call 503-429-1612 for your appointment.

New forest rule increases types of use

by Chris Thomas, Oregon News Service

New guidelines for managing national forests – including the 13 in Oregon, which comprise more than 15 million acres – soon will go into effect. Announced on January 26, the update gives bigger roles to conservation and recreation, while keeping timber harvests in the mix.

Now more than ever, the officials say, public lands are "multiple-use," which means balancing multiple priorities. Protecting watersheds and getting the forests in better overall health are at the top of the new list, according to Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack, "We think we can reduce the threat of catastrophic fires, we can address the bark-beetle infestation and other pests that are causing some concern; and we believe we can absolutely improve the health of watersheds. At the same time we're doing all of this, we're confident that we can produce jobs by supplying timber products to local mills."
