draw is available at the following links: buck deer hunts, antlerless deer hunts, elk hunts.

Hunts in the Starkey Experimental Forest, Hart Mountain National Antelope Refuge or Umatilla National Wildlife Refuge are not eligible for the program.

Tag recipients will still need to pay the standard price of the tag ($24.50 for deer tags, $42.50 for elk tags) and provide harvest and effort information to the ODFW office where the tag was issued within five business days of the closing date of the hunt. Typical tag sale deadlines won't apply under this program, meaning tags can still be purchased after the first day of the hunt season. (Rifle deer season opened Saturday, September 29.)

"We wanted to give active military members the chance to hunt with their family and friends when they are home in Oregon," said Tom Thornton, ODFW game program manager. "It's one way we can recognize them for their service to our country."

The Fish and Wildlife Commission may adopt this program permanently next week when it sets the 2013 Oregon Big Game Regulations.

Almost all rifle deer and elk hunting in eastern Oregon is limited entry and requires an advance "controlled" hunt application. It is sometimes difficult for active members of the military to plan ahead for a hunt due to the uncertainty of when they will be home.

Zoning will change for parts Rose Ave. and Weed Ave.

After the hearing closed, the planning commission approved all of the changes as one motion, with Planning Commissioner Sharon Parrow voting nay.

The Vernonia City Council held their public hearing on the same issue on October 1. The article on that meeting will be in the November 7 issue.

In other business, the Planning Commission accepted the resignation of absent member Don Wallace.

The next regular Planning Commission meeting is scheduled for October 18, at 6:00 p.m. at city hall.
