LOOK OUT FOR HIM.

The political mud-slinger is abroad in this county. He tells defeated candidates how they were sacrificed by the successful ones in the conventions, to make them feel sore and bolt the ticket; he represents to some of the candidates that others on the ticket are playing false, in order to create dissension, and his schemes and resources for defeating the men whom he is prejudiced against are numerous and various—they vary in accordance with the subject he is working on. He feigns to be ever so loyal and true to his party, but he sees great calamity and defeat staring the party in the face for the future if certain men are elected, when the fact is, he is moved only by personal disappointment, and is seeking revenge. He knows of wicked rings, pernicious stealings and political corruption which he whispers around to those who are not informed, and tells of "cinching" affidavits and wonderful revelations that will come to light and be sprung at the last moment.

Beware of him. Question him closely and make him produce his proofs. Invite him to produce his affidavits at once and see if they will bear investigation. You will find him a sore head who wanted something he did not get, and the very man who would be a staunch party follower if it was to his private interest, and moreover, one who would usurp his power and steal the most if he could get an opportunity.

VICE IN DISGUISE.

Some newspapers (?) delight to grovel in the details of vice and crime under the pretense of exposing the same for the benefit of the people, and if they can obtain a rumor of scandal or family trouble they paint the details in glaring colors and the imagination of the reporter is drawn upon to fill out the particulars not obtained. This class of literature is not written to expose vice, but is prepared to pander to the taste of those who are already steeped in vice and crime, or for black-mailing purposes.

It is a wonder that the good people of Portland allow such a paper as the Sunday Mercury to circulate in their midst. The fact is, however, that while it claims to be a terror to evildoers, it depends on that class for its support. It is always found in the low dives and places of bad repute, and is appreciated only by those of a coarse, lewd and brutish nature. Its pages teem with profanity, slang and lewd sensational stories. It is the scavenger of journalism, and greedily gathers and publishes every thing suggestive and lascivious in its tendencies. Like the buzzard that soars aloft over a pasture containing a herd, it maintains its distance until sees a dead animal, when it descends and feasts upon the reeking carrion.

AMENITIES OF JOURNALISM.

The Arizona Howler has succumbed to the "guessing" idioey. It recently made the following announcement: "Our readers now have a chance to reap a golden harvest. We have a well-developed hog in our office, and all are invited to guess its weight, the prize to the successful guesser being a $5 gold piece and an order on Al Daggett's saloon for ten straight drinks. Fill out the guessing coupon which we print in another column, and send it to the "Hog Editor." All guesses must be sent on a coupon. "Guess early and often."

Commenting on this, its cotemporary, the Arizona Kicker remarked: "The hog in the Howler office is the coyote who claims to be editor, and his weight is accurately recorded in the county jail, where it can be ascertained by any citizen. By all means guess early and often and bankrupt the galoot."

BLEEDING KANSAS.

Kansas is bleeding again, according to the Farmers' Alliance, which demands relief legislation from Congress, because thousands of farms are being seized by Eastern creditors for non-payment of interest on mortgage debts. One law firm, it is said; has a contract for the foreclosure of 1,800 mortgages. This is interesting news for Eastern capitalists who have been lending money there, and who are likely to be bled along with the farmers. The main grievance of the latter seems to be against the railroad companies, which may be overcharging, though the chief complaint usually made against them is that, by cheap rates, they bring the products of Kansas into competition with those of Pennsylvania and other Eastern States, depriving the farmers of the latter the advantages supposed to come from nearness to the great markets and shipping ports.

Those who have watched the progress of some of the small towns in various parts of Oregon and Washington cannot help but see a good prospect for the future of this place. Many small places have sprung into prominence within the last year, and they had very few of the natural advantages and resources that Tillamook has, and none that Tillamook has not. What we need here is push and energy to make things move.

New Zealand three years ago passed alaw, under which offenders might be released upon probation instead of being imprisoned for first offenses. The official returns for the first year show that out of one hundred and twenty-one persons so released, fifty-eight had so well conducted themselves as to be relieved from further supervision, fifty-three were still undergoing supervision, nine had failed to satisfy the conditions, and were imprisoned, and one only escaped from the knowledge of the authorities. The expenses of the system, so far as these offenders were concerned, were only one-tenth that of keeping them in prison. Queensland has already passed a similar Act, and New South Wales and Victoria are expected to do so.

As soon as Tillamook has a railroad, it will be a most excellent location for a college or seminary. It is time now to agitate the question and have arrangements formulated to secure an institution of this kind. No doubt there are parties here now who would donate grounds suitable, or the people of the town would provide for a good location, and a choice site can be secured now cheaper than in the future. When incorporated and improved, Tillamook will be one of the most beautiful little cities in Oregon, and the surroundings are pleasant and healthful. No finer site in the state can be found for such purposes.

The State Democratic convention at Portland made the following nominations: For Congress, R. A. Miller; Governor, Sylvester Pennoyer; Secretary of State, W. M. Townsend; Treasurer, G. W. Webb; Supreme Judge, B. H. Bonham; Superintendent of Public Instruction, Rev. A. LeRoy; State Printer, John O'Brien. W. S. Cone was nominated for Joint-Representative for Tillamook and Yamhill counties. The platform adopted is of little importance, except that it declares in an off-hand way for almost absolute Free Trade.

It is time to agitate the question of holding a fair in this county this fall. An exhibition of the products of the county would surprise some of the old residents, and it would stimulate competition and industry among the people. It would cost but little and would be of great benefit to send samples of Tillamook county productions to the Board of Immigration rooms in Portland for exhibition. Money expended for such purposes is the best investment that can be made.

The platform of the Republican State Convention declares its principles in language too plain and emphatic to be mistaken, and shows that the Republicans of the state are enthusiastic and confident in the success of the coming election. As the ticket is a good one it deserves success, and if every Republican will turn out at election and vote the straight ticket from Congressman to Constable, there will be no danger of failure.

There were but few contests in the recent Democratic convention in Portland and most of the candidates were selected by acclamation. This is frequently the case where a party is in the minority or there are little hopes of success, and it shows a lack of enthusiasm and confidence. If the Democrats had much hope of success, there would have been innumerable contestants fighting for places on the ticket.

The custom of "trading" and "swapping" in elections is to be deprecated under all circumstances. It is not right to sacrifice one man for the benefit of another, or to try to influence others to enter into such an arrangement. There are always a few bolters at every election who seek to do this, and they should be watched and remembered, as such political sins as these should not be forgiven.
