FROM WASHINGTON.

An Interesting Budget of News from the National Capital.

[From our Regular Correspondent.]
WASHINGTON, D.C., May 30, 1890.

The contest over the tariff bill is far enough advanced to clearly demonstrate that Speaker Reed made no mistake when he chose Major McKinley for chairman of the ways and means committee. From the very inception of the measure which he is now so skillfully engineering through the House, the Ohio Congressman has shown his ability to meet and successfully handle all the perplexing questions which enter into legislation of such importance, and in which so many different interests are involved. Those who are so ready to charge McKinley with inconsistency should pause to consider the nature of the instructions he is acting under. It is idle to assume that the chairman of the ways and means committee is simply considering his personal desires or the wishes of friendly interests in the proposed changes in the tariff schedule. Mr. McKinley is acting under instructions from the people, as expressed in the platform of the last republican national convention. The result of the Presidential election of 1888 was an endorsement of the policy which the McKinley bill proposes to apply. The Ohio statesman has accepted the result of the Presidential election, as he had the right to do, and the McKinley bill stands for what was promised the people in that contest. Mr. McKinley himself admits that the bill is not all he desired, but points out the fact that it is as near perfect as it is possible to get a measure of that nature. His course from beginning to end has been honorable, straightforward, and free from inconsistency. In addition to this he has managed his production with wisdom and tact, and there is no question but what he will be rewarded by witnessing its passage by the House by a strict party vote.

Walking up and down the long and narrow lobby assigned to the speaker of the House, with his hands hanging loose at his sides, Thos. B. Reed is often an object of interest to visitors to the Capitol, who can stand at a remote door and look in where they may not enter. Stopping for a moment with his hands behind him he sometimes stands and looks through one of the arch-ways and through the window beyond with a thoughtful and perplexed expression, and then with a gesture of impatience starts on again with his walk. This is where he does his hard thinking—if thinking is ever hard to him. When he is impatient here he sometimes has it out with some obstreperous little member, reasoning with him like a parent with a child. A look of resignation and enforced amiability comes over his round face when talking with some pestiferous mediocre member, and he reasons calmly and with staid deliberation and minuteness, bringing his manner down to the understanding of the man he has to deal with. As a member on the floor of the House, while a free talker, Reed was reserved in many ways and was congenial only on occasion. As speaker he holds his time at the disposal of members of the House, and, with a certain amount of suitable dignity is affable to every one who speaks with him. He has struck that happy faculty of never appearing to be in a hurry, and has curbed his wit and diluted his sarcasm.

It is authoritatively known at the Capitol that Colonel Canaday, Sergeant-at-arms of the Senate, will to-morrow tender the resignation of his office, to take effect on the first of June ensuing. To several Senators who have enjoyed his confidence this will not be news, as he has contemplated taking such a course for some time. His business engagements have been such as to command more time than he was able to give them and perform his official duties, and it becoming evident that one or the other must yield, he decided in favor of business, and this choice is known to many Republican Senators. Colonel Canaday has held the position for the past seven years, and in that time made himself generally popular. A courteous gentleman, with an obliging disposition, he has succeeded in filling the office to the satisfaction of those having business with it, and gaining for himself numerous friends. With the employees he is a favorite, and there will be few indeed who will not regret the decision he has made to withdraw as their chief and terminate the pleasant official relations existing between them.

The Marine Band concerts which take place at the White House grounds on Saturday afternoons will be more popular this summer than ever. It is evident that the White House people intend to make these concerts the occasion of bringing themselves into closer and more familiar contact with the people of Washington. Formerly the occupants of the White House studiously abstained from paying any attention to these concerts, but last Saturday the mansion was thrown open, and the balcony crowded with a distinguished party of friends invited by the President and Mrs. Harrison to be present. The closer approach to greatness thus permitted was highly appreciated by the people.

An Editor's Life.

One of the beauties and charms of an editor's life is in his dead-heading it on all occasions. No one who has ever feasted on the sweets of that bliss can begin to take in the glory of its happiness. He does $100 worth of advertising, for a railroad, gets a "pass" for a year, rides $25 dollars worth, and then he is looked upon as a dead-head or a half-blown deadbeat. He "puffs" a concert troupe $10 worth and gets $1 in complimentaries, and thus passed "free." If the hall is crowded he is begrudged the room he occupies, for if his complimentaries were paying tickets the troupe would be so much in pocket. He blows and puffs a church festival free to any desired extent and does the poster printing at half rates, and rarely gets a thank you for it. It goes as part of his duty as an editor. He does more work gratuitously for the town and community than all the rest of the population put together, and gets cursed for it all, while in many instances where a man who donates a few dollars to a Fourth of July celebration, base ball club, or church, is gratefully remembered. Oh, it is a sweet thing to be an editor! He passes "free," you know.—Ex.

Sam Jones' Latest.

I'd rather be a low-down chain-gang negro than one of your little infidels. You won't be in hell two minutes before you'll be hopping around the fire and yelling: "What a mistake I made." I have some respect for Bob Ingersoll, because he can get $200 a night for his lecturing. But some of these little fellows are infidels for nothing, pay $2 to hear Ingersoll, and board themselves. I understand you are all running "society" here pretty lively. Society! A pair of 75 cent slippers and $1.25 wasp bonnet lets you into it. There is no manhood, or womanhood in it. —From a recent sermon.

BRIEF PARAGRAPHS.

STATE AND GENERAL NEWS.

Telegraphic Briefs and News Notes
Gleaned from our Exchanges.

A new postoffice has been established at Mt. Hood, Wasco county, Oregon.

Word from Grand Ronde valley is to the effect that the grade for the Hunt line is completed twelve miles from Union.

The Rainwater stone quarry near Albany is shipping to East Portland the stone that will be used in the construction of the new M. E. church.

H. W. White tells the Albany Herald that the road to Quartzville is now open so that supplies can be packed into the mines. Several companies are at work. The Santiam district promises to show some good results this season.

The Baker City Democrat has received advices of a serious accident on the Union Pacific, near Aspin, Wyo. The east-bound fast mail went into the ditch, and George Thompson, one of the oldest engineers on the road, was killed.

The citizens of Monmouth met in mass meeting Monday afternoon to vote on the question of levying a tax for the building of a new school-house. The people acted on their better judgement and levied a tax of ten mills, and will have a commodious school-house immediately.

Beginning June 1, the Daily Morning Astorian will be issued every day in the year. It says: "Astoria is the largest city in the United States without a railroad. It is the smallest city in the United States with a daily newspaper that appears every day in the year."

Mrs. J. H. Snodderly, of Prineville, Crook county, was jerked backward out of a wagon by the sudden starting of a horse and her collar bone broken. On the same day James Dobbs, of Vesey creek, also suffered a fracture of his collar bone by the falling of his saddle horse.

Joseph Claypool, who crossed the Cascades by the Santiam route into Crook county two weeks ago, says that the snow on the summit is not over seven feet deep now, and that the prevailing warm weather will soon cause it to disappear sufficiently for wagons to cross—probably by the middle of June.

The commencement exercises of the State university will be held this year from June 15 to 19, inclusive. Rev. John Gordon, of Portland, has been engaged to deliver the baccalaureate sermon. Archbishop Gress will deliver the address before the literary societies, and Hon. George H. Williams will deliver the address before the university.

The competition for new styles in birth notices is still lively among the country press. The Astorian is easily ahead. Here is the latest: "The home of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Glenross was gladdened last Sunday by the arrival of a young American who will need no naturalization papers when he grows up. He was weighed last night, and weighs just one pound and two ounces."

The Salem Statesman says that six bands have been secured for the Fourth of July celebration at the capital. They are the Albany, Silverton, Independence, Stayton, Salem and Chemawa bands. There will be no lack of music from present indications. A prize of $150 is to be offered to competing fire companies throughout the state. The test has not as yet been decided upon.
