FROM WASHINGTON.

An Interesting Budget of News from the National Capital.

[From our Regular Correspondent.]
WASHINGTON, D.C., July 11, 1890.
The talk that Mr. Blaine will leave the cabinet as a consequence of the failure of the President to argue the adoption of the reciprocity policy immediately is not seriously considered in congressional circles. The popular idea is that he will find a way to meet the emergency without for a moment embarrassing the administration of which he is the premier. At a recent meeting of the cabinet Secretary Blaine's reciprocity proposition was the subject of discussion. With the exception of Secretary Windom, it is stated, the members agree with the views entertained by Mr. Blaine. The President, it is understood, did not offer any argument against the proposition.

Mr. Blaine's letter to the President practically declaring against free sugar unless accompanied by reciprocity with those Latin-American countries to be benefited by a repeal of the duty has created so decided an impression on Congress as to bring out more clearly than ever before just what the division of tariff sentiment within the Republican party is. In the first place there are the members from the northwest, who say that without free sugar the McKinley bill would be a complete failure in their section. They have so far carried the day, and will resist to the last extremity any effort to nullify or even neutralize what they have accomplished. The second place is that occupied by Mr. Blaine. The Secretary of State is contending a principle which, in his judgment, is essential to the continued success of protection in this country. He advocates free sugar, but he wants something substantial in return for it, and he thinks action on the subject should be postponed until suitable terms can be arranged with those countries having sugar to sell and standing in need in return of many of the productions of this country. The President, it is asserted, favors reciprocity, and under circumstances would favor free sugar. He did not, as has been supposed, give Mr. Blaine's letter, in laying it before Congress, an unqualified indorsement. That is to say, he did not indorse it to the extent of antagonizing the McKinley bill with it. But, at the same time, neither does he indorse that feature of the McKinley bill which makes sugar free. He is said to regard the time inadvisable for surrendering so much revenue when the pension budget is growing so rapidly and other expenditures are mounting up in proportion.

The Republicans are using all the power and influence they can to induce their absent colleagues to return in time to vote on the federal election bill. Mr. Lodge and other friends of the bill have a suspicion that the Democrats intend to absent themselves from the hall at the time of taking the vote, so as to break a quorum, and Republicans are being notified that they must be on hand to meet this possible contingency. It is hardly likely, however, that the Democrats will resort to this means of breaking a quorum, as it would be but a temporary expedient and would not be apt to accomplish the defeat of the bill, as a quorum could be got together in the course of time. Besides it is intimated that between five and ten Republicans will vote against the bill, and if the Democrats were more successful than the Republicans in securing the return of their absent members there might be a possible chance of defeating the bill. But their chance of doing so is extremely slim; though they will cling to any chance however remote.

Old soldiers who are entitled to pension under the dependent bill approved by the President Friday will be glad to learn that their claims under the new law are likely to be speedily adjudicated. Gen. Raum, Commissioner of Pensions, said yesterday, in speaking of the matter, "The work will be so divided that cases under the new law will move right along abreast of the old cases. It would be unjust to make claimants under this latest act wait and take their turn. So instead of putting the new cases behind the rest we will begin work on them at once, and carry them right through as fast as possible."

One of the strongest speeches yet made in favor of the Lodge election bill was delivered by Col. Henderson, of Iowa, Saturday. As a debater Henderson has grown wonderfully since his entrance to the House, and his effort last week was regarded by his colleagues as one of his best.

The degree of doctor of laws has been conferred on Speaker Reed. The doctor was entitled to distinction for the manner in which he treated the contested election cases.

BRIEF PARAGRAPHS.

STATE AND GENERAL NEWS.

Telegraphic Brevities and News Notes Gleaned from our Exchanges.

The United States has 16,000 flour mills.

There are 685,000 women voters in England and Wales.

A New York house ships 60,000 school books to Japan yearly.

Huntsville, Ala., is to have a new law will move right along abreast of the old cases. It would be unjust to make claimants under this latest act wait and take their turn. So instead of putting the new cases behind the rest we will begin work on them at once, and carry them right through as fast as possible.

London has a woman's cigar-makers' union with nearly six thousand members.

New York tailors kick against fashionable people who smuggle clothes from Europe.

The people of this country consume it is said, 200,000,000 bottles of pickles annually.

None of the salmon canneries on Yaquina or Alsea bays will be run this season, owing to the low price of salmon.

D. Edgar Crouse, a rich bachelor of Syracuse, N. Y., is finishing a stable which is said to have cost $700,000.

The freight tariff on the Astoria & South Coast railroad from Astoria to Clatsop beach is 25 cents a hundred pounds.

Senator Pettigrew of South Dakota says enough tin will be produced in Dakota next year to supply the entire United States.

The size of the farmers' alliance of North Carolina is securing the politicians. They want a railroad commission and no free passes for legislators.

Clackamas county has put a fine bridge, 800 feet long and ten feet high, from Padding river to the bluff on their side. It is high water proof.

A Dallas man was stung between the eyes by a bee a month ago, and is now subject to occasional fainting fits, which are ascribed to this peculiar cause.

The farmers of Eagle valley, Baker county, are willing to contract the sale of their hay at $9 per ton. There is an abundance, as well as in every section of the country, and what to do with their product puzzles them.

The Astorian of July 6, says: "Engineer McCausland, of the Albany and Astoria surveying party, is in the city. The force is going right ahead and expects to get through to Tillamook by the 15th of next month. The survey will then be completed, as it is already finished from Albany to Tillamook."

William Knemeyer, a native of Germany, and for twenty-five years a resident of Astoria, died Tuesday night, aged 69 years. Some five years ago, or more, he went back to the old country, and returned with a wife, who, with a daughter four years of age, are the surviving members of the family. He leaves considerable property, acquired during his long residence in Astoria.

The secretary of state has received official information that the special election held in Wallowa county, on the 30th ult., to elect a representative, there having been a tie vote at the general election on June 2. E. W. Barnes, democratic candidate, was elected over A. W. Gowan, republican candidate, by a majority of twenty-five votes. This makes the House stand forty-two republican and eighteen democratic.

The World's Mail.

An industrious statistician has been collecting figures relating to the postal business of the entire world for the year 1886. He develops some very surprising and impressive facts, in which, however, it is exceedingly hard for the ordinary mind to follow him. It is easy to read, for instance, that in the year 1886, the people of the civilized world sent almost six billions of letters, more than a billion of postal cards, nearly five billions of newspapers, and more than a hundred million merchandise packages, making in all nearly twelve billions of mail parcels. But who can possibly realize the meaning of such figures?

We can easily follow our statistician, however, when he proceeds to show us what regions of the world make the largest use of their mail facilities in proportion to their population.

America, with a very much smaller population than the continent of Europe, sends more than half as many mail packages as the whole of Europe. The figures are a little upward of seven billions for Europe, and almost four billions for America.

Asia sends but a comparatively small number, and Africa a much smaller number still—less than one mail package in a year to every seven inhabitants of the continent.

How great a contrast is presented by the case of Australia, where twenty-four letters, cards, papers and parcels are sent on an average to every inhabitant annually! Australia, indeed, makes the largest use of its mail facilities of any continent of the globe.

To circulate the world's mail matter, no fewer than half a million persons are employed, and this matter is distributed from more than one hundred and fifty thousand postoffices, of which about one-third are in the United States.—Ex.

At Dallas, Polk county, a young son of Mrs. Lizzie Dale met with a singular and painful accident. He stepped on the handle of a pitchfork, which by some means caused the tines to fly up, and to keep them from striking him in the face he threw out his right hand and one of the tines passed nearly through the center of his hand.
