

A "Diplomatic Case" Lawyer.
There is a young lawyer in Brooklyn who has secured a very considerable practice by handling the "diplomatic cases." They say in Brooklyn that no person can receive an injury on any of the Brooklyn city railroads without having one of this young lawyer's cards thrust at him before the doctor gets through dressing the wounds. The lawyer advances all the necessary funds and prosecutes the case to conclusion, taking a good share of the fee for his reward. By dint of long practice he has become thoroughly familiar with all the legal lore pertaining to the railroads, and when the corporation lawyer comes in to defend the case he finds an opponent as well versed as himself in all the nice technicalities of procedure in such cases, who knows all the snags and pitfalls of legal efficiency by means of which litigation is often protracted and plaintiffs tired out when they have a good case.

The result is that when these cases are tried there is less of fun all around. Sometimes the ponderous corporation lawyer does not happen to be personally acquainted with his young antagonist, and unaccustomed to such a bold, bluff, or plain-spoken hit. Then the fun is very lively, and the result is that the ponderous corporation lawyer learns that in any contest it is well not to meddle with your opponent.—Interview in New York Times.

An American in the Mountains of India.
Most Americans are satisfied with Darjeeling. It is one mile and a half straight up in the air above the sea, and if you could rise seven towers like the Eiffel, built in tiers one on top of the other, or seven tallies Washington monuments into one long iron pipe and run a elevator through the whole, you would just about reach this altitude. I could not believe there is a village in Switzerland so high as Darjeeling, and I am certain there is nothing in the Alps to compare with the grandeur of its surroundings.

The plains of India send up moisture to the Himalayas which give them a monsoon climate where the Alps have one, and here you see clouds of all kinds and shapes shading each other over the hills before you. You see them crawling up the steep sides of the valleys and climbing to your very feet, when they envelop you, and for ten minutes the mist is so thick that you cannot see the forest on which you are riding. A moment later the clouds have passed, and it is as clear as day and the view above.—Frank O. Carpenter's Letter.

A Double Headed Moccasin.
A party of fishermen returned home from the Sitka Bay three miles below Galena, Alaska, where they had been fishing since early morning, with splendid success. Their particular disciples of Writton had only secured an abundance of black fish, salmon, pike and mackerel, but brought back with them the most double-headed moccasin ever witnessed in this city. It was no less than a double-headed moccasin, pure and indubitable, and a perfect specimen of that of the moccasin variety, its length being little short of two feet, and its circumference around the widest part of its body eight inches three quarters.

How Politeness is shown.
Politeness is manifested by courteous inquiries after the friends and families of those whom you meet and in manifesting a cordial interest in them. It is shown by devoting a little space to every letter to "remembrance" for friends. It is a luxury to write occasionally to all from whom you have received kindnesses which warrant you in so doing.

According to the Necessity.
It was the day of the late unexpected water famine in Englewood. In the house of a man in York street there was only half a gallon of the precious liquid, and the youngest member of the family, just in from a game of crack-the-whip, was preparing to wash his hands.

"Remember, Tommy," said the father, "the water in that pitcher is all there is in the house. You are the smallest of us, and your share of it ought to be less than any one else's."

"It doesn't go accordin' to size," replied Tommy, pouring half the contents of the pitcher into the wash bowl, "but accordin' to the dirt."—Chicago Tribune.

Easy Mathematics.
"It is ninety and seventy-six hundredths miles from Philadelphia to New York," said the teacher. "A cat crawls into the hollow wheel of a freight car in Philadelphia; the wheel is thirty-one inches in diameter; how far does the cat travel while the train goes to New York?"

"About twenty-eight feet," said the smart bald boy at the foot of the class. "It was our cat, and she climbed out of the wheel and got run over before the train pulled out half a mile south. When the train got past she looked like a man of the far producing region of the Hudson bay territory, spread out over—"

"But the morning hour having expired, and it being the teacher's day to faint, and the time having arrived, she took up the business on the speaker's desk, and proceeded with the regular order.—Courier Journal.

Boys.
Lionel—Dish boy, did old Hodges really forbid you the house?
Archie—Yes, sir. And when I called Monday, dish boy, know, he had me arrested at the door.

Lionel—Great heavens, you know—
Archie—But, by Jarve, I've a terrible vengeance for him, y'know.
Lionel—Archie—What?
Archie—Why, you see, dish boy, power you know he put it in my pocket—
Archie—To—aw—jilt his daughter—aw!—Harper's Bazar.

OH, MY BACK!
STOP IT NOW.
IT WILL BE TOO LATE.
I have been troubled many years with disease of the kidneys and have tried many different remedies and have sought aid from different physicians without relief. About the first of April I was suffering from a very violent attack that almost prostrated me. I bought a bottle of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and after taking a few doses I felt a most wonderful effect, and to the astonishment of all the guests at the hotel, in a few days I am happy to state that I was a new man. I will recommend the tea to all afflicted as I have been.
