JUST THE MAN.

Suppose James G. Blaine should be nominated and elected president, who would we get for Secretary of State, asks an exchange.

Well, that's easily answered. Oregon has a man who is especially qualified for that position. He would be in no way inferior to his illustrious predecessor.

No use to mention his name as everybody will readily understand we refer to Sen. John H. Mitchell, who has diplomatic abilities not excelled by any man in the United States. Oregon couldn't afford to lose his services as a Senator, however. We say this without belittling the abilities of our other representatives, as it is well known that Oregon is ably represented at the National Capital.

UNFAIR COMPETITION.

We are opposed to state printing offices. We are opposed to the government doing its own printing, and especially, when it goes beyond that and competes with the printing fraternity by furnishing ready printed envelopes below living rates. All there is in the wholesystem, is to give fat positions to politicians and their army of spoil seekers. The government had just as well engage in manufacturing boots and shoes, or any other industry, as to come in competition with the printing business.

NEWSPAPER LAW.

For the benefit of all who may seek to swindle the newspapers out of their just dues, we publish the following which is kept standing as the head of the first editorial column in many of our exchanges:

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary are considered as wishing to continue their subscriptions.

2. If subscribers order the discontinuance of their periodicals the publisher may continue to send them until all arrears are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect to or refuse to take their periodicals from the office of which they are directed, they are held responsible till they have settled their bill and ordered their paper discontinued.

4. If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher and the papers are sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

5. The courts have decided that refusing to take periodicals from the office, or removing and leaving them uncollected for is "prima facie" evidence of intentional fraud.

6. Any person who receives a newspaper and makes use of it, whether he has subscribed for it or not, is held in law as a subscriber.

7. The postmaster who neglects to give the legal notice of the neglect of a person to take from the office the newspaper addressed to him, is liable also to the publisher for the subscription price.

We clip the above from one of our exchanges, and see many papers are publishing it just as if it were law. We have never been able to find all these statements in any authorized legal book, and don't believe such laws are even necessary. If a man wants a paper, he knows it, and will order it. We don't want our subscribers to be obliged to hunt us up with a club in order to get their paper stopped when their time is out. And you do not want to force our be ineffective any way.

Of course, every country paper has a great many subscribers, personal acquaintances, who are reliable, and who would feel offended if their papers were stopped promptly at their expiration, but they generally signify their intention of taking the paper until they order it stopped. Besides, no man can consistently order his paper discontinued until he pays all arrears. However, the publisher should stop it for him if there is no prospect of pay, and teach the whole fraternity of dead-heads that they can't get something for nothing.

The most successful papers require pay in advance, and stop promptly at expiration, and it is just as easy to pay in advance for your country paper, as to send your money in advance for the city weeklies. The large papers never lose any bad subscriptions, and this system, or a little judicious care on the part of country publishers, makes such laws unnecessary.

The Assessor has not yet received the blank assessment rolls, all on account of a press of work in the state printer's office. This delay is likely to cause great inconvenience and considerable expense, an extra session of court probably being made necessary in this county. The state should be prepared to do the printing, or let it out to parties that are prepared.

It should be remembered that the Fair Association is not a money making institution, for individuals or for the corporation. The individual stock holders are put to great expense without any financial return, and if there is any profit to the corporation, it is immediately invested in improving the Fair Grounds. The sole object is to advance the interests of the county. It is hoped everyone will feel generous towards the institution.

We have recently received a copy of the Prison Mirror, a paper published in the state prison at Stillwater, Minn. Its motto is "It is never too late to mend." We have seen many worse papers published outside the prisons, and we suppose there are many worse men on the outside than the inmates.

BIG MONEY FOR A BIBLE.

The Oldest Printed Copy Sold to a Wealthy Chicago Man.

The first Bible printed by Gutenberg—at any rate one of the first set—is still in tolerable preservation. Chicago has it, and it cost the buyer, James W. Ellsworth, $14,800. In these three statements is the germ of a whole volume of curious lore. At first view it seems incredible that printing should have been invented but 400 years ago, or thereabouts, yet this book is one of the very first of the set printed at Mentz by Gutenberg in 1450-3. It is in Latin, printed with Gothic type, with the prologue by St. Jerome.

The history of the invention of printing is not so clear as one might wish. Such as it is one may find it in any work devoted to such subjects, but one fact of interest is that many of the earliest books were very well made and ancient. This book, with many other rare and ancient works, was disposed of at the recent sale of the great Brayton Ives collection in New York, and Chicago literary circles were almost as much excited over it as over the World's fair. At the first day's sale 216 books and manuscripts sold for nearly $40,000, the great prize being this Gutenberg Bible. It is in two parts, only seventeen of the original leaves are lacking and these are supplied in facsimiles.

Of course it cannot be proved to a certainty that this was the first book ever printed, but it was among the first. The only other Gutenberg Bible is in the Lenox library at New York. Next to this Bible the sharpest contest was for the letters of Christopher Columbus, and the largest of these sold for $1,300. Carter's "New France" sold for $1,000. An original of John Eliot's Indian Bible sold for $1,050. This volume is very richly bound, and the longest word in it is Wutepessitakusunnawobantankogh, meaning "knocking down to him." Another book attributed to Gutenberg, and the fourth book printed with a date, sold for $1,700. Book fanciers estimated that the loss of the seventeen pages depreciated the Bible sold to Mr. Ellsworth at least 40 per cent. With them it would have been worth $20,000.

The Eagle Was Old and Tough.

An industrious negro of East Nashville, Tenn., has got into trouble. He sold fowls for a living, and recently agreed to supply a customer with a turkey. As that night the turkeys roosted high and the hen coops were locked, he went home empty handed but not discouraged. He owned an old gray eagle, which he had received from his former master at the close of the war, and which was known to be at least forty years of age. Howland dressed the

ATLANTA'S WONDERFUL BOY DOCTOR

A Five-Year-Old Who Has a Splendid Knowledge of Anatomy.

America has "boy preachers," "boy orators" and "baby musicians" almost by the score, but Atlanta, Ga., comes to the front with a boy doctor, and has every reason to be proud of the precocity of this youthful citizen, who has seen fit to depart from the rut heretofore adhered to by juvenile geniuses.

The youngest of the name is Albert Verner Fenschel, and he is only five years of age. He was not long since the recipient of an honor that has never been in all history conferred upon one so young. During the recent convention in Atlanta of the Southern Medical society he was unanimously elected to honorary membership in that organization as the youngest medical student known to the profession.

The president of the society, in calling the members' attention to this youthful prodigy, stated that although he had not yet reached the age of five years, he was possessed of a knowledge of anatomy, especially of osteology, equal to that of many graduates of medicine. In his exhibition before the society Master Albert was able not only to give the technical and scientific names of each of the 200 and odd bones of the human skeleton, but to describe their various functions, divisions, tuberosities, tubercles, depressions, processes, articulations, etc. He can repeat also the names, origin and insertion of nearly all the muscles of the human body, the process of circulation and of digestion.

He has since been examined by the professor of anatomy in the Southern Medical college of Atlanta, and has been given a certificate of graduation in anatomy.

The child is the son of an army surgeon at present stationed at Fort McPherson, near Atlanta. He was born at Fort Niagara, N.Y., at which fort his father was then stationed. This fort is located near the Sioux reservation, and Master Albert's earlier and sole playmates were the Sioux children. His favorite playmate was an Indian boy named "Two Kettles," who is still lovingly referred to.

Albert's knowledge of anatomy dates from about a year ago, when he was given a dilapidated copy of "Gray's Anatomy," with colored plates and illustrations, which, through childish curiosity, he asked to have explained to him. These explanations made a permanent impression upon his brain, and inspired him with a desire to learn more about the fascinating science.

In October last he attended with his father a lecture at the Southern Medical college of Atlanta, where he heard a lucid and simple explanation of the bony structure. When he returned home, to the surprise of all he was able to rehearse in his own way the substance of the lecture. Since that time he has been a regular attendant upon the lectures of that college, where he is a general favorite with the professors and students.

Some one has presented him with a complete skeleton, which is prized more highly than blocks and other toys. In addition to electing him an honorary member the Southern Medical society presented him with a gold medal to still further attest their admiration for his remarkable talent.

The future surgeon and anatomist attends a kindergarten school, and is just beginning to spell short words. He is a handsome child, with large, lustrous brown eyes, rosy cheeks and long golden curls.

Reverencing His Wife's Death.

A Florida widower is devoting himself to a peculiar and life long revenge. Some years ago his wife fell overboard in Jupiter Inlet and was eaten by sharks. Since then the bereaved husband has spent all his time on the waters of the inlet, and up to date has killed 300 sharks. He proposes to follow them until he dies.

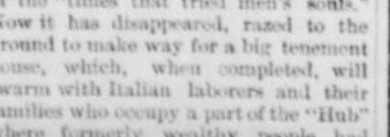

A Famous Building Torn Down.

"The midnight ride of Paul Revere" is one of the glorious and stirring incidents of the American revolution. The historian has told in stately prose and Longfellow has sung in thrilling verse of the patriot's dash along the imperiled country side to warn the sleeping farmers that the redcoats were coming.

But Paul Revere is only an honored memory now.

His home are dust; his sword is rust; His soul is with the angels, we trust.

Until recently the house at Boston where he was born stood as a memento

WHERE REVERE WAS BORN.

of the "times that tried men's souls." Now it has disappeared, razed to the ground to make way for a big tenement house, which, when completed, will swarm with Italian laborers and their families who occupy a part of the "Hub" where formerly wealthy people had

A Girl's Rapid Change of Names.

At Springfield, O., the other day, within twelve hours a young woman wore three distinct family names. In the morning she was Lizzie Ryder, sweet sixteen, and deeply in love with Barton Tavenor. Being under age and having no parent or guardian to give consent to the marriage, the girl was adopted in the afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Osborn, with whom she had lived from babyhood, and her name was changed to Osborn. In the evening she became Mrs. Tavenor.

The New President of Sorosis.

Dr. Jennie Lozier's stature is rather below the medium height, and she has a well rounded figure. Her face is oval, and tinted with health in lips and cheeks. A pair of frank blue eyes, which have a trick of dancing with fun sometimes, flash out beneath a quantity of hair that time has powdered to a most becoming shade of whiteness. Her manner is full of a kindly cordiality which is palpably unaffected, and is most winning.

In Favor of the Kaiser.

When an emperor who is very nearly an autocrat slaps a subject on the shoulder, greets him as "old friend," and begins a pleasantly confidential chat, the rest of the courtiers who are dancing attendance naturally conclude that the aforesaid "old friend" is in high favor and that he is to be made the object of honors and emoluments.

This is the case with Dr. Johannes Miguel, formerly a burgomaster of Frankfurt-on-the-Main. He has been a member of the reichstag since 1867. About a year ago Emperor William gave him the slap on the shoulder that showed excess of royal favor. Soon afterward Dr. Miguel entered the Prussian cabinet, and he now holds the place of minister of finance. It is said that he is slated to succeed Caprivi in the chancellorship, and next to the kaiser he will be the chief authority in the political management of the German empire.

An Incentive to Matrimony.

A Davenport (Ia.) dry goods dealer who is a believer in matrimony recently told his female clerks that he would give bed-room sets to those who married before May 1. Within two days his prettiest employe claimed the prize. She had lost no time in bringing one of her favored admirers to terms.

The German universities have a widespread fame that attracts many wealthy and ambitious young men to their classic halls. There are at present on the lists the names of nearly 2,000 foreign students, over 400 of whom are Americans.

WHAT TILLAMOOK HAS.

Picturesque scenery. Over 50 miles of coast line. Clam-beds till you can't rest. Streams full of trout and salmon. Rich coal deposits on the Nehalem. A climate as good as any on the coast. A large and well equipped livery stable. Plenty of game: water-fowl, deer, elk, bear, etc. Good prospects for a railroad in the near future. Natural harbors at Tillamook, Nehalem, Netarts and Nestucca. Open hill land valuable for grazing and fruit-growing. One of the prettiest and thriftiest towns, Tillamook, in the state. An enterprising, prosperous, contented and hospitable class of people. Tide-land and bottom land, the richest and most productive in the state. A rapid, but healthy growth and most promising prospects for the future. Many quarter-sections of fairly good government land which may be had for the taking. Fine ocean beaches at Netarts, Nestucca and Nehalem, which are already becoming popular resorts. Vast bodies of accessible timber which is said to be the best and most valuable in the North west. A harbor which will be one of the best on the coast, when a few thousand dollars are spent improving it. Half-a-dozen fine rivers, which with their tributaries, are of inestimable value for navigation and floating logs. Beautiful and productive prairies which contain many farms suitable for dairying, stock-raising and general agriculture.

WHAT TILLAMOOK CITY HAS.

A good bank. A drug store. A jewelry store. A good saw mill. A Fire Company. Two newspapers. Several public halls. A beautiful town site. Two photograph galleries. Commodious warehouses. An excellent hotel building. Plenty of hotel accommodations. Two saloons and a temperance parlor. The head of navigation on tide water. Many elegant and commodious residences. Good stores in most every line of business. Public buildings that are a credit to any town. Thriving Odd Fellow, Masonic and G. A. O. lodges. A large local trade from the surrounding country. Daily mails and stages connecting with the railroad at North Yamhill. An enterprising class of citizens who are determined to build up the town. A Fair Association with ample grounds which will soon be put in good shape. Two churches, with the Methodist, Catholics and Christian denominations represented. Almost every branch of business and profession represented that is necessary to the welfare of an enterprising community. Steamer connection with Portland, the Augusts and making regular trips besides frequent visits by other small steamers.
