

The electric lights are a great success. Council meeting next Saturday night. Chop feed $1.50 per hundred weight. at "Frisko Store." 47-48.

The Truckee came in Sunday, and is loading at Hobsonville.

The gasoline launch is working successfully between here and Bay City.

Three lbs. best Japan tea ever sold in Tillamook, for $1.00 at "Frisko Store." 74.

Cato Sullivan is making a trip through the southern part of the county this week.

The Steamer Garfield is fast being completed, and will soon be ready for business.

A. G. Reynolds will, in the course of a few days, open up a photograph gallery in this city.

The new hotel at Hobsonville is a large, substantial structure, and will be a great convenience for that place.

E. E. Selph was elected Chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee, and C. C. Balbridge, Secretary.

The telegraph is being made use of very extensively by our business men, and is proving a great convenience.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. Church, will hold a May Day Fair and Festival Friday, May 6th, at Hadley's Hall.

The Augusta was expected leave to Nehalem last Sunday afternoon. She was loaded with boxes from the Nehalem Mill Co.

The Democratic Convention, held here last Thursday, was rather harmonious, and nominated a fairly good ticket, though we think the Republicans have a better one.

N. P. Hanson has a fine three-quarter Clydesdale Stallion, which he will stand in the south end of the county during the season. He recently had bills printed in this office.

Dr. Wise and Assistant, of Albina, will be in on the next trip of the Augusta, with headquarters at the Occidental hotel, where he will be pleased to meet anyone wishing dentistry done. 47-48.

The Elmore leaves Astoria regularly on Mondays and Thursdays, and leaves Bay City Tuesdays and Fridays. She made her first trip, coming in Saturday evening, and leaving Sunday morning.

One hundred and fifty suits of men's, youths', boys' and children's clothing now on the way from the eastern manufacturer, which we expect in on next trip of Str. Augusta, for "Frisko Store." 71.

James Sykes, of Salem, will stand "Lami," the noted Percheron stallion, at Tillamook this year. This horse has a certificate signed by the President of the Agricultural Society of France. See bills.

The frame for Williams saw mill at Bay City is up, and part of the machinery in place. It is a very extensive and substantial structure, and with the wharves and appurtenances, will cost a great deal of money.

It is about time, right now, that a certain shady institution in this city should make a contribution to the city treasury. The authorities should look after this matter. This hint ought to be sufficient, inasmuch as it is as good as a kick to a blind mule.

By an inexcusable error on our part the names of the Beaver delegates to the Democratic County Convention were omitted in our report last week. G. W. Wallace, Otto Walther, and E. F. Lyster were the delegates, represented by G. W. Wallace, who held the proxies of the others.

Candidates who have received nominations should at once take proper steps to have certificates of nomination filed with the County Clerk, as well as their acceptances. There is considerable red tape about the matter, but a man who is not negligent or incompetent to do it, is not fit for a public official.

The HEADLIGHT was issued before the Democratic Convention adjourned last Thursday, but an extra, giving the names of the delegates and candidates nominated, was issued a few minutes after the convention was over, and in time to put a copy of the supplement in every paper before being mailed.

A LAND OF PROMISE, RICH IN VARIOUS RESOURCES.

A Fine Beach—Magnificent River—Timber And Coal—Growing Towns.

Following a wide, sandy beach, about ten miles north of the entrance to Tillamook bay, at Garibaldi, you pass over one of the finest sea beaches in Oregon. It is very wide, one-fourth of a mile, at low tide, the sand is packed hard, and it is a magnificent drive. Here and there, standing like bold sentinels, out in the breakers, are picturesque rocks, lashed and worn into fantastic shapes by the ever surging waves. Some of these rocks are arched, some appear as if hewn out by some supernatural power, and on the tops of some of them are trees and shrubbery. The wide shining beach, the vast expanse of ocean on the west, and the wooded hills on the east, make a combination pleasing to the eye, and the effect is to cause one to forget the cares and worries of business and work, and feast his mind on the grandeur spread before him. Back from the beach, next to the foothills, the low embowered table lands are all occupied by settlers, their habitations being sequestered by clumps of spruces and alders, that fringe the upper line of the beach. Along this line the ground is higher than it is farther back, and in some of these sylvan retreats there are beautiful lakes, teeming with trout, and swarming with wild fowl. Back of this the waterfall leaps from the mountain wall, and dazzling in the western sunlight, lends enchantment to the panorama below. Here the mountain gorge pours forth its cataract of cold, pure sparkling water, and the forests further back are the rendezvous of deer, elk, bear and other game. This extends for miles along the beach, and is sure soon to attract summer visitors in great numbers. The only thing in the way at present is the lack of good roads leading to the beach, but this is being provided for, and the Barview House, near Garibaldi, is already a popular resort. There are yet some good places to be taken half a mile back from the beach, on the base of the foothills.

The Nehalem river, at its mouth, follows south along the shore line for four miles, separated from the ocean only by a low sand bar. The government proposes to build a stone jetty across this channel, at A. L. Alderman's place, and force the river to cut a new channel across this sand bar, straight to the sea, and thus improve the entrance for shipping. Preliminary appropriations have already been made for this purpose.

About four miles north of the present termination of the bar, is the aperture in the mountain wall where the river makes its exit. Passing inside these headlands, the canyons are seen on the right, and here is where the enormous salmon catch of Nehalem river is packed. The river now widens out into a veritable bay, and at high tide is over two miles wide. The river bank is dotted with ranchers' cabins, and the mountains back are heavily timbered.

The impression made on a person, on first sailing up this river, is wonderful and lasting. No river on this coast, not even the far famed Columbia, shows more magnificent and imposing grandeur. The deep smooth running waters are as clear as crystal, tinted beautifully by the profuse foliage that overhangs the banks, and the numerous islands, clothed with nature's mantle of verdure, make it a scene of unsurpassed and luxuriant splendor.

The valley is not very wide, just enough usually for a tier of ranches on either side, but of unusual productiveness, and on the foothills back is much comparatively level land, which will make good farms when the timber is cleared away.

The timber is the largest source of wealth. For over 100 miles into the interior, the hills and mountains are covered with a dense forest of fir, spruce and cedar. There is enough of the very best timber here to supply the whole lumber trade of the Pacific coast for years to come. The trees are of immense size, unequaled by any other locality in the North West, and stand so thick that they are very even in size, and free from limbs for 100 to 150 feet from the ground, many of them being from six to twelve feet in diameter. There is no belt of timber in Oregon or Washington that will compare with this in extent, magnitude and quality. There are billions of feet of it—just such timber as is of most use in the market, and millions of dollars will soon be expended in sawing and placing it in the great centers of use.

About four miles above the cannery is Tohi's Landing. Two years ago it had the appearance of a primitive wilderness. Now, everything is bustle and activity. At this place Mr. Henry Tohi has a store and a saloon, and the Nehalem Mill Co. has erected and is operating a mill that has a cutting capacity of 40,000 feet of lumber per day. The box factory, in connection, is a very extensive and complete plant, and is turning out boxes at a rapid rate. The mill is constructed and fitted out in the most substantial manner; has dry houses, wharves, and plenty of room for booming logs. The mill stands on an island, and fresh water is piped from the main-land. At the present, the mill is engaged in filling contracts for large quantities of boxes for the Astoria and Alaska canneries. All kinds of finishing lumber, mouldings, etc., are turned out. The Company has a large store, conducted by H. E. Nelson, the Nehalem Mill Co's manager, and a large and complete stock of general merchandise is to be found in it, in fact, everything in the way of provisions and supplies that a Nehalemite could wish.

begin the erection of large and commodious buildings on the mainland for a saloon, a warehouse and a store, with a public hall, and a school house will be built shortly. Andrew Klein has almost completed a large two-story hotel, with plenty of room, well finished, and it will be furnished and running at an early date. Mr. Tohi and the Nehalem Mill Co. have laid off a townsite here, and are selling lots at very low figures. It is an excellent townsite. Three-quarters of a mile above, in fact, almost adjoining is E. G. Wist's townsite of Nehalem. Mr. Wist has been here for a long time in the general merchandise business, and has a store that would do credit to Tillamook City. He keeps everything from farming machinery to household furniture, and dry-goods to drugs and medicines. He has a large stock of all kinds of hardware, feed and loggers' supplies, and does an enormous business. He is preparing to build a large two-story double-fronted store building for his increasing business, and will have a capacious hall overhead. Mr. Wist keeps the Nehalem P. O. Mr. Larsen is commencing the erection of a very large two-story hotel building, a saloon building has been put up by Jas. B. Pape, and a butcher shop will go up immediately. I. R. Holmes has now running a very good hotel and store, and is building additions. Mr. Wist has let a contract for grading on the streets of his townsite to cost $800, and is pushing ahead with great enterprise to build a town. There are no better stores in the county than these on the Nehalem, and it is but a short time until the two points mentioned will be built together in one city, fronting on the river for nearly a mile, and the spirited rivalry, now existing between the two places, will sink into insignificance. A little way above, and nearer the forks of the river, is Kolb. Krebs' saw mill, which is doing an excellent local business.

Nehalem needs wagon roads and will soon have them. At present, the skiffs, canoes and dugouts furnish about the only means of transportation, and are called "Nehalem wagons." It is surprising to see the facility with which they are utilized by Nehalemites, even the school girls being experts in handling oars.

Deep water, navigable for all craft that can come over the bar, extends up the river past the forks, about twelve miles from the sea, and small boats can ascend much farther. There is 20 to 30 feet of water for 10 to 12 miles at low tide. On Coal creek, a tributary of the North Fork, are rich deposits of excellent coal, easily accessible, and only waiting for railroads and other transportation. The North Fork has much good agricultural land tributary, and large areas of timber all along its course. The South Fork is nearly one hundred miles long, and runs throughout its length through one of the most dense forests in the world. It has many tributaries rich in coal and timber, besides agricultural lands all along the banks. The Nehalem river and many of its tributaries will float logs at all seasons of the year, and the timber is so accessible, that the Nehalem region is sure to become one of the lumbering centers of the United States. It is timber everywhere, and in all directions—stretches of which extend for miles and miles. The new surveys open up a great deal for settlement or acquisition by lumbermen, but much of it has never been surveyed; there are large regions which have hardly been explored.

Away east of the coast range, and outside of this county, the timber region still extends, and there the river is settled quite thickly, but every acre of that section is tributary to the Nehalem river, and logs will be floated down its course for more than one hundred miles in time to come, and when the harbor improvements are made, will be saved into lumber and go out in big ships to all parts of the world. People who live in the Nehalem region can form no adequate conception of the future of their favored land. It will be a rich county of itself, and will have a city of importance second to few in the State.

New industries and businesses are being started all the time. Settlers are coming in rapidly, and the era of improvement and development is at hand.

the great city of San Francisco, and relates a wonderful experience. Dan is all right in a logging camp, but he says he never will risk himself so far away from home again. He went per steamer and was sick as death as soon as he got over the bar. He threw up everything but his boots, and took them off to save them. Enfeebled as he was the excitement at the dock when he arrived in San Francisco was too much for him. The hotel runners howled like Comanches, pulled and tugged at him, and would have kidnapped him, had he not called a policeman. Those brazen hackmen seemed to know he was from Tillamook and swooped down upon their victim in a way that completely stamped him.

He escaped from the main crowd finally, but a straggling hackman found him, put him in a covered carriage which looked like a hearse, except it had doors in the side, and then locked him in. Dan told the fellow to take him to Mr. Smith's, who lived somewhere in the city, and for two hours the hackman, who sat on top, drove around over the city inquiring for Mr. Smith. Finally by the aid of a directory, the particular Mr. Smith that was sought was found and Dan was released from the clutches of the hackman by paying a ransom of Five ($5.00) Dollars.

He started on the next day to see the sights. When you once "get onto the ropes" it is cheap and safe to get around, and you can ride as far as ten miles on the street cars for 5c.

There are some fine horses to be seen, and people drive as if they were going after the doctor right on the streets. At the Woodward Gardens are all kinds of animals in cages and signs up to warn people not to tease the tigers and not to feed peanuts to the bears. The glass houses contain all kinds of vegetables, and it is supposed that they furnish the winter market with garden truck.

It is very expensive to be around in a big city like Frisco. They make charges for everything. Dan paid 50c to get inside a board fence to see balloon go up, when he could just as well have seen it from the outside, if he had known it in time. They build a board fence around a vacant lot and on a clear night, for 25c you can go inside and take a look up at the moon. There are museums where you pay 25c to go in, 25c to be shocked, 25c to see the only white negro in the world, and 25c to get out again. A man can't make a move without being at some expense.

People there have queer habits. Most of them stay up and keep the lights burning all night, and they make so much racket that a stranger can't sleep in the town, if he goes to bed. Many of them are very wealthy, but the poor people seem to be in the majority. Many of them are ragged and dirty. Some of them are very bold, and a man passing along the street minding his own business is likely to be called in any time. There are fellows who pass around and keep giving you small hand bills and circulars, and if a man should go to all the places advertised this way he would be sure to be robbed. A man will have his pockets full of these bills after passing up the main main street. There is great danger of getting buncoed, and it isn't safe to talk with strangers.

A man wanted Dan to go with him down to the docks and see a new boat launched, but Dan was to do it for him, and wouldn't do it and take the chances of being "slangled." There are fellows who meet you and speak as if they had always been acquainted with you. It is safest to let them alone. Some of the people are very high-toned. They have big brass dogs, and stone lions in the act of springing to frighten the burglars away. There are wooden angels on the top of some of the houses, and in the park there are marble angels, all of which are reaching out one hand for money. Dan played a great joke on one by putting a clay of tobacco in her hand. Some of the marble angels were almost indecently exposed, rather decorative.

Some of the buildings are very high, and there is a good deal of marble and fancy work in some of them, like the Palace Hotel, where the dudes hang out. San Francisco is a big town and there are all kinds of people and Chinese there, but it isn't as good a place to live as Tillamook.

Dan went to the mountains and learned a few tricks about logging in California, and was perfectly at home there. Then came the dreadful sea-voyage home. He was quite sick owing to something he had eaten which would not stay down, all the way home. He suffered from spasmodic convulsions of the stomach, and the worst of it was, he couldn't get anything into his stomach to convolute. On entering Tillamook bay, he regained his equilibrium, and now says he'd rather be a knot on a log here than a millionaire in San Francisco. All that matted his pleasure was the electric lights which Tillamook has started since he was away, and he still keeps his hands on his pocket-book while on the streets here. He will go as far as possible up into the mountains.

Messrs. Mitchell and Rhude have about 100,000 feet of saw logs in the North Nehalem ready to come down as soon as there is a sufficient raise in the river.

County Surveyor, John Edwards, has just completed the survey of the county road, running from the North terminus of the State road to the Clatsop County line. A good many advantageous changes were made from the old county survey, and the viewers pronounced it an easy and practicable route.

Nehalem valley seems to be progressing with a steady growth and improvement. Quite a number of new houses are to be erected, and several new barns are to be built this spring, and it is reported that a newspaper is to be started at the town of Nehalem. The only trouble is the depressed condition of the lumber market, which throws a damper over the loggers and saw mill men. A.

"ENTERPRISE, JR."

The Noted Norman Stallion,

Will Make the Season of 1892.

At John Day's Barn in Tillamook City.

DESCRIPTION.—

ENTERPRISE, JR. is a rich Mahogany bay with black points, white star in forehead, large, full, bright eye, fine flowing mane and tail, has a clean cut, well-shaped head, held erect on a well arched neck, good shoulders, is broad in the chest and is very high on the withers, with good legs and feet. He is spirited, showy and handsome, has good carriage and fine action, stands 17 hands high and weighs 1750 pounds. He is a horse that is much needed on this coast, and when crossed with trotting and running bred mares, produces fine carriage and coach horses. He has received several premiums and among them are: First premiums at Oakland and San Jose and second at Livermore, Cal.

—PEDIGREE—

He was sired by the Norman horse, "Enterprise," imported by Theo. Skillman, of Petaluma, Cal.; he by the celebrated Norman horse "St. Lawrence." His dam was a full blooded Cleveland Bay.

THE Cleveland Bays are a typical carriage and general purpose horse. They transmit color and general characteristics to their progeny in a marked degree; are sure to become popular among the horsemen of this country. They possess wonderful powers of endurance—the stallion trots 18 miles within an hour, carrying the enormous weight of 250 lbs., and this marvellous feat has been often surpassed.

Terms, $15 to insure.

Does this Catch your eye? Read on!

WE WERE NOT LOOKING FOR the hearty endorsement of our aims and methods in merchandising which the Tillamook public has showered upon us this fall and winter.

They seem to realize that we are sincere in our public utterances, and when we said we had a very attractive stock, they came to look over it. When we told them that it was good value for their money, they bought freely, but we are glad to say that our stock is not nearly exhausted by the heavy drains made upon it by the purchasing public.

We have the best of connections with the great centers of supply, and standing as we do, with our finger on the pulse of trade, we can tell just what the public wants.

The public will see in the local columns of this paper from time to time, the special bargains we have to offer.

Until further notice we will make you special prices on queensware and boots and shoes. We mean business. Come and see.
