A Modern Bluebeard Fined for Killing His Wives.

The announcement that Mir Khudadad Khan, the ruler of the capital of Beloochistan, has been fined 40,000 rupees by the British authorities for having murdered five of his wives suggests that in the British view human life is one thing in Europe and another thing in Asia. The dispatches indicate that some of the Khan's other wives had also excited his suspicions, as the British agent compelled him to liberate several "surviving prisoners." The fine imposed upon this modern Bluebeard will be divided among the families of the deceased wives.

Khudadad wears an uneasy crown. Upon his accession to the throne in 1857 he was forced to put down a rebellion fomented by some of the chiefs who had just elected him. In 1863 another uprising caused him to abandon his throne in favor of his cousin, Sher Dill Khan. The latter fared no better, for he was murdered a few months later and Khudadad again called to the throne. The reign of Khudadad since that time has been stormy and precarious. The sole support of his tottering power is the British government, which subsidizes this barbarian prince at the rate of 100,000 rupees a year.

Jewish Cosmopolitanism.

The most notable paper in the Revue des Deux Mondes for February 15 is the fifth and apparently concluding one of M. Anatole Leroy-Beaulieu's series on "The Jews and Anti-Semitism." This one is headed "Jewish Exclusiveness and Jewish Cosmopolitanism," and its main contention is that, so far from having a tendency to form a state within a state, the Jews readily amalgamate with any nation they may settle among, if only they get a chance to do so. They have only been driven into exclusiveness by persecution; in fact, by the exclusiveness of other nations who insisted that, whatever happened, the Jews should not resemble themselves. It will be noticed that wherever anti-Jewish sumptuary laws are, or have been, in force, their object is to stamp the Jew as such, and make it impossible for him to be to be taken for an ordinary citizen, whether he has to wear a cap of peculiar shape, or (as in the Middle Ages) a little disk of red or yellow cloth, or is forced to go barefoot, as in Morocco. Where the Jews have been treated with common fairness and decency they have as a rule become the most patriotic citizens of their adopted country; and while faithful to their ancestral religion, show no particular desire to keep up national distinctions. Where several nationalities co-exist in one country they tend to amalgamate with one of the number, usually that one which is most firmly rooted in the country. Not only do they try to show themselves French in France, Germans in Germany, English in England, Americans in the United States, but they endeavor—which is more to their credit—to be Poles in Poland, Danes in Denmark, Magyars in Hungary, Czechs in Bohemia, Bulgarians in Bulgaria.

Let us have a Land Parade.

A land parade in New York of the crews and marines of the ships that will take part in the great naval pageant would form a unique and fitting climax to the naval display. Composed of several thousand sailors of various nationalities, the parade would excite the lively interest of all classes, and prove an instructive as well as entertaining spectacle. The Chamber of Commerce, which has charge of the project for the land parade, deserves hearty encouragement.

Hugged the Wrong Girl.

Henry Brown is as mean as his daddy if not more so. Some days ago Hi Plummer was expecting up on a certain train his sister, Mrs. Waymire, of Kansas, whom he had not seen for over twenty years. She came sooner than expected and went to the home of her sister, Mrs. H. M. Brown. That evening Henry and Hiram got on the train at the water tank, the latter intending to take his sister by surprise. As it happened there was only one lady on the train. Henry said, "there she is," and Hi slipped up behind the lady, embraced her, and was proceeding to plant numerous kisses. The lady objected, the conductor appeared and explanations were in order. The next thing we expect to hear is that Brother Brown has induced somebody to put up a similar game on him.—Folk Co. Itemizer.

Yamhill County.

[Reporter.]

Dr. G. W. Goucher died at his home in Amity on the 8th inst., and was buried on Sunday under the auspices of Amity lodge A. E. & A. M.

The editor of the Tillamook Headlight while in Portland recently attended church. Neither the style of the sermon nor the "offertory," nor even the cadence produced by one of the female singers suited him, not being up to the Tillamook standard.

The Farmers' and Traders' Bank at North Yamhill has closed its doors. C. A. Martine, who constituted the bank, made an assignment on Tuesday to G. A. Douglas. The extent of the failure is not accurately known at this time. Mr. Martine, who was in the city Wednesday, stated that the deposits amounted to something like $4,000 and that the assets would probably cover forty or fifty per cent of liabilities. Lack of confidence on the part of the public is the cause which Martine freely assigns for deciding to close business. Failure of the Gervais and Sheridan banks contributed to his embarrassment, and deposits that formerly ranged from $10,000 to $12,000 dwindled to about $4,000. A spell of illness which kept him from business for a few days aggravated the trouble and he made an assignment as a means of heading off a probable run on the bank. The acknowledgment is also freely made that he had no capital invested. There must be something radically wrong with the banking laws of the state, that adventurers like Martine and Baldrige, with a capitalization of gall, are able to establish themselves in the important function of banking and becoming custodians of the people's money.

Nehalem.

[From the Times.]

Higginbotham & Bergman brought in a fine raft of logs for the Nehalem Mill Company, Saturday.

The mill of the Nehalem Mill Company is running regular, and the prospects are that it will continue so.

Two steamers and a lumber schooner at the wharf here Sunday, looks like Nehalem is coming to the front as a seaport.

The Polar Bear came in from Astoria Thursday. This will be her last trip to this port for some time, as she leaves for Alaska the latter part of this month.

School commenced last Monday with Miss Mabel Page as teacher. Miss Page is well qualified for the position and the Times congratulates the directors for being able to secure her services.

W. Finley got out a fine spar this week for the schooner Lizzie Fien. It is 63 feet in length and 12 inches in diameter and was finished in nice shape. There is as fine timber for spars in this valley as can be found anywhere.

Work has commenced on a plank walk from Krebs' saw mill to Nehalem, and will soon be completed. Mr. Wist has informed us that he will build a walk across his town, provided the citizens of Nehalem City will do likewise.

An Arabian pedlar was through here this week. He complained of hard times and small sales in this balliwick. This is as it should be, the people are beginning to realize that every dollar that they spend with such fellows is so much taken out of the country, they now deal with the home merchants, and the money is kept in circulation at home.

Washington County.

[Hillsboro Independent.]

Hiac potlach chicamon. Until the 24th taxpayers may wait upon Sheriff Ford. After that date he will wait upon taxpayers. You take your choice and pay your money.

The telegraph office in Hillsboro is likely to be closed after the 15th, as operator Everitt has resigned to take effect at that date, and no other operator has been sent out to take his place.

Facing horses are the fashion now, and he who has a pacer is envied. Join R. Sawyer is spending much time in training his trotters to go at the new gait. It is a villainous hybrid between a trot and a run, but it is fashionable.

[Forest Grove Times.]

It is reported about Gales Creek that Dr. C. M. Hines has bought the Hines mineral spring on Clearwater creek, and will build a hotel there this season. The spring is almost directly on the Tillamook road and might make a good stopping off place for travelers to Tillamook.

The stone for the Father Upchurch monument was received safely in Portland. The Forest Grove stone receives favorable attention everywhere, and the owners here are much encouraged over the prospects. Most of the necessary operating machinery has been procured for the quarry and the remainder will be soon.

Secretary Carlisle's favorite relaxation is a game of poker with a twenty-five cent limit. He is almost invariably a loser.

Professor Virchow, the eminent pathologist, keeps alive for experiments several generations of cats, from which he is trying to evolve a race of bob-tailed felines.

A Seneca (Kan.) woman refused to register upon the plea that if her husband hadn't enough sense to do the voting for the family she doesn't want to live with him.

The Woodford (Ky.) Sun tells of a wooden legged cat that flourished as a famous rat killer in Woodford county, clubbing the rats to death with its artificial limb. The kitten was born with only three legs.

The North Yamhill Leader has changed hands again, Mr. Martine having turned it over to Ira Phelps once more. The paper was understood to be on its last legs when Mr. Martine took hold, and it was improved under his regime, but it seems now to be only a question of how long.

The Ochoco Review tells the following very funny incident. Yesterday afternoon Judge Sumner united in marriage A. B. Conly and Louisa J. Ranes. The wedding occurred at Mr. Conly's residence, eight miles west of town. That no regrets or jealousy is harbored by the bride's former husband, Larkin Weaver, because of the marriage, is proven from the fact that he willingly accompanied Mr. Conly to the clerk's office to attest as to his former wife's age.

A California editor has invented an infernal machine which can be put in an envelope and sent to those dishonest subscribers who refuse to pay for their paper. The machine explodes and kills the whole family and the fragments that fall in the yard will kill the dog also. Glory certainly awaits the inventive editor when he leaves this mundane sphere. He will have an upholstered chair and will be allowed to sit with his feet on the table in eternity.

Carter Harrison's election as mayor of Chicago by 20,000 plurality assures the visitors at the world's fair that everything will be thrown wide open Sundays and week days, and that women and children may go to and from church with safety from insult, provided they are careful to follow the back streets. Chicago at best is a den of iniquity, but the overwhelming vote cast for the candidate of the slums has pronounced her perfectly Parisian in the variety and extent of her wickedness.

The Pittsburg Law and Order Society, which has been prosecuting newsmen and carriers under a Blue law passed in 1794 for handling papers on Sunday, now announce that the publishers of Monday morning papers are to be prosecuted if work on those papers is begun before midnight on Sunday. Such bigotry belongs to the days of the Salem witches. The action of the Pittsburg inquisition should bring the law of 1794 into such odium as to cause its speedy abrogation. It ought to have been abolished years ago.

"A gentleman well versed in Indian character is of the opinion that they are not fit subjects for citizenship," says the Sheridan Sun, "and although the votes of the alleged Grand Ronde Indian citizens were counted at the last election, he thinks they should not be permitted to vote any more. He says the average Indian knows but little, if anything, of the economy of this government, and cares less. The greatest aspiration of the red man is to get his noble hide full of whisky. This, the ruling passion of the Indian, is one of the chief reasons why he should be a ward, and not a citizen. In the latter capacity he ought to have no interference with his 'personal liberty,' but as a ward few people care to provide him with the stuff. Under the influence of liquor all the mean traits of the Indian nature are developed, and he is in a fine humor to provoke a row with some noble Caucasian and kill or be killed as the case may be. If they are allowed to vote, their votes will become a commodity, for purchase by coin or whisky, and there will be a keen competition in the market. Politically, the Indian will be on a par with sheep and cattle, and all the efforts of humanitarians to improve the social condition of the red man will have been in vain. They cannot hope to hold office in the north any more than the negro down south. Summed up, the suffrage of the Indian will exist merely for the convenience of the astute but wily politician."
