THE BORDEN CASE

THE EVIDENCE AGAINST LIZZIE
NOT STRONG.Several Clues as to Other Suspected Parties.

BALTIMORE, Md., June 18.—Mrs. Ramsey, who keeps a boarding house at 333 St. Paul street, says that previous to the Borden murders a boy came from New England and boarded with her. He told her that he was the adopted son of Lizzie Borden's uncle, and that his name was Felix Borden. He said that his parent's name was Deroches. From all accounts he did not live happily with the Borden's and as a result of a disagreement with them he left home suddenly. Felix told Mrs. Ramsey that his home was in New Bedford, or Fall River. He spent his money freely. He did not pay his board bill, and left saying he was going to his home in Massachusetts to get money to settle. A few days after Felix left the Borden murders were committed. He returned to Baltimore. On one occasion Mrs. Ramsey spoke to Felix about the murders. She says that he replied, "Oh, Lizzie did it." Asked if the young man was ever heard to make any threatening remarks about the Borden's of Massachusetts, Mrs. Ramsey said:

"During the two years Felix lived here he spoke frequently of the Borden's, and judging from his remarks, I did not think he cared very much for them. He referred, I remember on one occasion to some old woman up there, and did not speak very complimentary of her. I judged from his remarks that he had had a quarrel with his people before he came here, although he never told me the particulars."

Asked to describe the young man, Mrs. Ramsey said he was a medium-sized fellow, with dark hair, and when he left was 21 years old. His description it is said, tallies with that given by several witnesses Thursday, who said they saw a strange young man at the Forden gate the morning of the murder. Young Borden left Baltimore last fall and has not been seen or heard of since.

STILL ANOTHER CLUE.

SPRINGFIELD, ORE., June 18.—Charles Perry, a well known real estate man, and politician, is likely to play an important part in solving the mystery which hangs over the Borden murder at New Bedford, Mass. Last October a stranger came to this city and sought Mr. Perry, who then ran an employment agency for work. Mr. Perry's kind treatment gained the fellow's confidence and he confided to him that he was a criminal and had murdered the Borden for revenge, also that he was a sailor. This sustains the theory that the murder was committed by a sailor for some wrong inflicted on his father by Mr. Porden many years ago. The fellow wanted to give himself up, but finally disappeared. Mr. Perry had forgotten the incident until he saw an account of a mysterious individual who related a similar story to a barber in Jersey and the description given tallies with the man who called on Mr. Perry.

LOOK FOR ACQUITTAL.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS., June 18.—The work of preparation among the counsel in the Borden case was going on all day. The consensus of opinion is that Miss Borden will be acquitted in short order, or the jury will disagree. In the former event it is understood there will be no jubilation, but she will retire quietly from the scene of so much unpleasantness as quickly as possible. In the latter event, she may come to a new trial, or the case will be nolle prossed later on, she being allowed to go on her own recognizance, provided counsel stands in the breach. Arguments will probably take all day Monday, and the charge will be given Monday.

The Cowboy Race.

WATSON, Neb., June 18.—An expectant crowd of people was on hand at break of day to greet the riders in the cowboy race, this being their registering place. At 3:25 a cheer was raised by the crowd, and in a cloud of dust two riders, each leading a horse, trotted up to the Saxton house, dismounted and registered in the following order: Gillespie first, Stevens second. Five minutes later Doc Middleton arrived and went through the same performance. The horses were in good condition and apparently as fresh as the day they started. After watering the horses, the riders departed together. Sioux City is 65 miles from this place, and on an excellent road. They will without doubt arrive there to-morrow. Middleton had to forbid the people from pulling hair from the tail of his horse, such was the rush of people to get moments from the race. The other riders are expected about midnight.

"Rule 12."

Rule 12 of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers has come into conflict with the United States interstate commerce law and got a black eye. When the decision of Judge Taft that obedience to its mandate constitutes a conspiracy against the United States and is therefore punishable as such will stand depends on the final decision of the United States courts. The case will be next laid before the United States circuit court of appeals.

Rule 12 of the Locomotive Engineers declares in effect that when a strike has been approved on any given road by the grand chief it shall be a violation of obligation to the order for the engineers of any other road to handle the cars of the route where the strike is on. Chief Arthur approved the strike on the Ann Arbor road and sent out circulars to the connecting roads directing their engineers to observe rule 12.

The Ann Arbor company laid the case before Judge Ricks of the United States district court, representing the injury done to it by the boycott. Judge Ricks issued an injunction to recall the circular. He did so, but five engineers and four firemen refused compliance and obeyed rule 12 rather than an order from the United States court. They were arrested for contempt of court.

There were two lawsuits. One was the petition praying that the injunction be made permanent which forbids Chief Arthur to order compliance with rule 12. Judge Taft decides that the injunction shall be made permanent because rule 12 is clearly in conflict with the interstate commerce law.

The other case was that against the engineers and firemen who refused to haul the cars of the Ann Arbor road, even after Chief Arthur had issued the circular declaring his order was rescinded. Judge Ricks found by the evidence that four of the engineers and firemen actually resigned their places in good faith rather than transfer freight of the Ann Arbor road. This they could do because a man has a right to quit his employment at any time. But in case of the remaining engineer the evidence showed that he did not actually resign his place, but evaded the issue. He therefore was found guilty of contempt of court. The result of lawyer Frank Hurl's appeal from this decision will be awaited with interest.

Poor Ross Smith.

The letter left by E. Ross Smith, the murderous lover at Evanston, contains a lesson and a warning. He says that he prayed for the lightning of his grief when Effie Clark refused to marry him, but no help came. Then follows this: "The only hope I have of receiving comfort is to get such control of my emotions that I can keep thoughts from entering my mind."

In the last sentence poor Smith states one of the profoundest truths of metaphysics. To get control of the emotions is indeed the only way of receiving comfort. Ross tried it. He could not, so he murdered the girl who would not marry him and then killed himself. Smith's state of mind was insanity, as his roommate says. True love asks the good and the happiness of the one loved, whether that happiness consists in marrying the lover or not. Smith was jealous. He was in a fever of passion, rage and disappointment, but there was not a spark of true love for the girl in his soul. He was merely the victim of his own un-governed emotions. The supreme work of every one is to train himself to think or not think of a thing as he chooses.

The individual without emotions is as lead and cold as a log of wood. But the person who has strong emotions and can control them can make the happiness and well being of himself and all around him. It is the secret of all power, all happiness, to rule our emotions and passions, to know just when to use them and when to draw rein on them. We are never entirely comfortable till we learn to sit on ourselves.

France knows how to punish public officials when they are guilty of taking bribes. Balaunt, the corrupt ex-minister of public works, must be imprisoned five years, pay a fine of $150,000, lose his rights as a citizen and pay back to the receiver of the Panama Canal company part of the $75,000 which he took from the company as his price for promoting their interests. Blondin, who was the go between for Charles de Lesseps and Balaunt, gets two years' imprisonment while Charles de Lesseps gets five years. The three men together—Balaunt, D. Lesseps and Blondin—must pay back to the Panama company's receiver the $75,000 which was paid from its treasury as a bribe to Balaunt.

A doctor lately read an essay on traumatic psychosis following a fractured skull. He went out of his way to humiliate words to keep the public from knowing that he meant, or thought he meant, sanity caused by a fracture of the

The salmon usually caught at the falls at Oregon City, with spoon and line are the young ones, weighing from two to five pounds, but occasionally an old stager takes the hook and is landed, says the Enterprise. The other evening there was an exhibition before the post-office the biggest salmon caught this season with hook and line. It was caught from a boat anchored below the falls and fortunately the boat slipped its anchor when the salmon was hooked, and before he was landed the boat had reached and was circling in an eddy below the paper mills. It was four feet long and weighed 38½ pounds.

Gideon Steiner, the fish and game dealer, is the man who has proven to Salem people that this beautiful city is located upon gold fields. Last Friday he went over to the excavation for the new city hall, corner of Cheneketa and High streets, and secured seventy-five pounds of the dirt. Putting this into a pan he subjected it to a hydraulic process with a lawn hose and washed it down to a tablespoonful of gravel and dirt. This latter he took to W. W. Martin's jewelry store and that gentleman in making an assay found gold worth about two cents from the pan full of dirt. At this rate a ton will yield 53 1-3 cents.—Statesman.

Mr. Chas. D. Barker, of Atlanta, Ga., has on hand a job lot of $80,000,000 of Confederate bills, clean and in good serviceable condition, with the first stamp of the Confederate government on them in regular and constitutional form. This is all new money, not soiled by use and not shop worn. It was never in circulation and has been lying at the old Confederate capital undisturbed for nearly thirty years. It might be sent to Kansas to satisfy those who insist that money does not need intrinsic value, and only performs the office of a yard stick or quart measure. They want a few millions of this kind of money, and it would save the government the expense of printing it.

A railroad company that refuses to take freight from a connecting road is subject under the interstate commerce law to a fine of $5,000. Engineers who refuse to haul the cars of roads where there is trouble with the employees lay the company for which they work liable to this fine.

Swinburne has not done himself much glory in the versenaking line recently. But the poem he was inspired to write about the Chicago exposition is equal to his best. Not in years has he given the world anything so good as the ode beginning, "Sunset smiles on sunrise; east and west are one."

The Irish begin to be indignant that the monkeys and monsters in zoological gardens always receive some Hibernian name. Says one gentleman from the green isle: "I tell you, brothers, it is an infamous degradation to call sea lions and baboons and chin p neezes and hippopotami after our brothers and sisters in the dear old country." The Irish gentleman is right. Let all the animals be rechristened and let the biggest monkey be named Ward McAllister.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals ought to get after that Chicago showman who will try to make the inhabitants of his Eskimo village live themselves in seal skins during all the hot weather of the World's fair. If the established theological view is the correct one, the heat under which that showman makes his Eskimos sweeter is nothing to the torrid temperature he himself will be called on to endure one of these days.

The British house of lords cannot certainly last much longer. The rising tide of democracy will rise and overwhelm them. They have lately made themselves more than ever obnoxious to the people by voting down a bill providing that where there was no will children in Great Britain should share equally in the real estate of their parents. This would in a modified degree destroy the right of primogeniture, which has lasted so many centuries in Great Britain. The eldest son would indeed have his title, but nothing to maintain his state. The house of lords evidently believe the dictum of the old colored preacher that "self preservation am de fust law of nature."

When the Russian government has been shot at or an attempt made to blow it up, it always publishes that the perpetrator of the deed was insane. This is to bear out the broadcast statement that nihilism has been suppressed in Russia. Adrianoff, who killed the mayor of Moscow, was at once officially declared to be out of his mind.
