ANNOUNCEMENT

Commencing with this issue the HEADLIGHT will be under new management. The able manner in which the paper has been heretofore conducted leaves little room for improvement, but it will be the earnest endeavor of the present proprietor to convince its readers that the HEADLIGHT has not lost by the change. We shall try to make it, in the future as it has been, the brightest, neatest, country newspaper in Oregon, and present to the people of Tillamook county a paper that they can depend on as representing the best interests of the county. We cannot hope to prosper unless the county prospers. The HEADLIGHT is still the county official paper, and in its columns will be found the county court proceedings, tax lists and other county notices, and all happenings of any import. To those who have supported the paper in the past we extend greeting and respectfully solicit their patronage in the future. To those who have not supported the HEADLIGHT we also extend greeting and just as respectfully suggest that it is not too late to subscribe.

VALEDICTORY.

As will be seen by another announcement in this paper, I have sold the HEADLIGHT to Mr. Coates.

I have worked for the past four years to give the people a paper that would be a benefit to this country, and believe that the effort has not been without avail. The success of the paper is, of course, due to the liberal support of the people. For this I feel grateful.

Mr. Coates, who has purchased the paper is proficient in newspaper work and there is no question but he will make it a success henceforth.

Something in the way of a long valedictory is usually expected under such circumstances in a country newspaper, and an article that I wrote a few months ago under the heading "Horn Creek Bugle" expresses my sentiment better than anything else I can think of. Following is an extract from it:

"Dear friends and enemies, we have sold out. We can say without fear of distending the truth that we are heartily glad of it, and perhaps our many readers can cheerfully say the same thing.

While among the good people of Horn Creek we have aimed to do the square thing and at the same time earn a living. At times we failed as it was hard to do both successfully in this community. If we had had plenty of money all the time we could have issued a better paper, and always championed the cause of the poor and oppressed, but such was not the case. Sometimes we were obliged to depart from the path of rectitude to pick up a dollar. These dollars could not always be found in the path of rectitude, and they were necessary in our business. Other people besides editors have been known to do the same thing.

In our time we may have offended some people. Sometimes it was done accidentally, and sometimes on purpose. It was our intention to tell the truth, yet we failed at times. On several occasions parties threatened to lick us, and perhaps we needed it in some instances. Others said very bad things about us, some of which were true no doubt. An editor is not a saint anymore than a doctor or a preacher.

The utterances of a paper are not the utterances of a private individual. They should be above that. The moral tone of a paper itself must be above that of the average editor—or anybody else. Otherwise there would be a bad lot of newspapers, and the same rule must apply to lawyers and statesmen, else there would be anarchy and crime on every hand.

Now as to what we have done for the people: We have waxed eloquent in describing the resources of Horn Creek and its tributaries, and have enthusiastically informed the world of every improvement made in the village. When your friends have died, we have wafted them to the other shore with words of comfort and sympathy to the bereaved; we have published the sad requiems you composed while standing at their tombs. We have burst forth with warblings of our choicest poetry when you got married, and have welcomed your new born into the world with all the pomp imaginable, just the same as he or she were going to be a Daniel Webster or Susan B. Anthony some time in the future. We have kicked at the county court and town council, just to please you, while the court and council were composed of pretty good average men, after all.

We have written some powerful editorials on the great economic questions of the day; have wrestled with the tariff and criticised the Alaska sealing commission, but we doubt if our efforts were appreciated at all times. We have pulled the British Lion's tail, ripped him up the back, and walked all over his mangled fragments, yet the Bugle has remained in comparative obscurity.

We have lied in the interests of a great many of you, and it goes against our grain to tell a lie. We have shared your joys and sorrows, have supped with you and dined off the same crust, for many moons, but now, alas, we're going to leave you.

We've grown too rich in the business to run a newspaper any longer. We shall remove to Wall St., New York City, and start a bank. Later on we may endow a kindergarten or soup house in order to carve our name on the pagoda of fame. We have relinquished our claim on the Bugle to Mr. Coates, and will let him get rich for a while. Treat him tenderly; pay him that $1.50 you have owed so long and encourage him in that noble work in which he is engaged, viz: to run a newspaper in the interests of morality and the resources of Horn Creek.
W. F. D. JONES.

The Duke of Veragua is said to be financially embarrassed and will probably lose his entire estate in Spain. He is only one of many who will go home from Chicago "busted."

President Cleveland has gone to Buzzard's bay, where an interesting family event is expected within the next two or three weeks. Before leaving Washington he called the extra session of Congress to meet August 7, and it is also stated that no more appointments will be made till next month.

An exchange pertinently remarks that a local paper is in a sense the directory of the town in which it is published and every business man in the place should have an advertisement in the paper, even if it only contains the name, address and occupation in order to give probable consumers and the public generally an opportunity of getting acquainted with the business of the place.

It has come to light that some of the cowboy racers, and among them the winner, did a good deal of their racing while sound asleep in a hack with their horses trotting patiently along in the rear. They worked this trick by night and it is apparent to any fair-minded man that the prizes should be given to the horses and not to the men.

Prince George of Wales, heir-apparent to the throne of England was married July 6 to Princess May of Teck. The occasion was celebrated with more pomp and brilliancy than any event of recent years in England. Princess May was betrothed to George's elder brother, Albert Victor; who died shortly before the time set for the marriage. The match is a very popular one with the English people, both bride and groom being general favorites.

Another expedition has started for the Polar regions with Lieutenant Peary in command. The hardships that have to be undergone and the terrible fate that has overcome so many brave explorers seems to have no effect on scientific enthusiasts, unless it is to lure them on to bolder attempts. The Falcon and her brave crew have the good wishes of all, even though it is difficult for people to believe they can accomplish enough to justify the risk involved.

We clip the following from the Oregon City Enterprise: "The Willamette Pulp & Paper Co. have just received their last installment of the 3,000,000 feet of spruce from the lower Columbia, but find it of such good quality for making paper that they are having some more brought up. This spruce makes the very best quality of paper and the company can start a log in at the upper mill and in fifteen hours turn out paper ready for the printing press. Were it not for the boiling required to reduce the pulp it would take less than one hour to turn a log into paper, so rapid is the process employed.

FIRE, FIRE!

Our enormous stock of general Merchandise which was saved from the fire will be sold for cash at a great sacrifice. These goods were not damaged by fire or water, but by handling are slightly soiled in some respects, though not to lessen their actual value.

WE NEED MONEY.

Owing to our heavy loss in the late fire we must convert our goods into cash as quickly as possible, and offer such bargains as were never known here before.

A reduction of 2.50 to 5.00 on every suit of clothes.

A reduction of 50 cts. to 1.00 on every pair of shoes.

Hats at almost any price. Ladies dry goods at figures that will astonish you.

We have just received a large and full assortment of groceries which we are selling at Portland prices.

Don't forget that we pay the highest prices for country produce.

We are located at King's corner, and with the large warehouse we are erecting adjoining, we will once more have the largest store in town.

Goods delivered free of charge, no matter how large or small the package, to any part of the city.
