Mr. Willing, manager of the Tillamook Creamery, is very anxious that the farmers here should be as well posted as possible on how to have good pure milk, and has had a number of cards printed with the Dairyman's Ten Commandments, which we print on another page of this issue. He will distribute the cards among his patrons. If the dairymen follow these commandments there can be no complaint about the milk.

Some small boys about town have been amusing themselves of late by torturing and killing cats. In one case an old cat was tied and the boys cut her legs and tail off, then threw her out to scramble about and die in her misery. The names of the boys are known, and there is talk of having them arrested. It would be a good plan to send such boys to jail, as such horrible cruelty is worse than stealing.

There was a jury trial Monday in Judge Mansby's court. Michael Sullivan plaintiff vs. F. M. Shearer defendant. Plaintiff got a horse in trade from defendant, and in a few days the horse died. Plaintiff claimed that the horse was represented to him as being sound and all right and therefore wanted his money back. Defendant claimed that plaintiff was fully aware that the horse was unwell when he traded. After due consideration the jury decided in favor of the plaintiff.

Teachers' Institute.

The Institute was called to order at the Tillamook school house on Monday, August 7, 1893, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, by T. B. Handley, deputy superintendent, president, J. E. Hosmer, instructor, and 35 teachers of this and neighboring counties.

The subject of arithmetic was introduced by Prof. Hosmer and discussed by the Institute with a lively interest.

AFTERNOON:
"Grammar and Language" was introduced by Mr. Handley and a lively debate followed in which Messrs. Hosmer, Brooks, Batterson, Hoff and Newell, Mesdames Hosmer and May, and Misses Cattain, A. Ross, Kitty Mills, Ida Pagenkopf and others took part, each warmly defending their own opinion on the various questions as to how, when and why in different methods of instruction.

Several minor topics from the query box filled up the afternoon programme.

TUESDAY MORNING.
"Moral Lessons" by J. E. Hosmer occasioned a very instructive discussion ranging over the entire field and merging into the question of stimulants and narcotics which had been designed for another hour.

One difficulty teachers all seem to encounter is the use of tobacco in the schoolroom. Many ingenious plans were suggested but most speakers confessed to partial failures at least. One teacher met with good success by establishing a roll of honor.

AFTERNOON.
"Penmanship" was introduced by F. D. Vincent and discussed by the meeting. A division of sentiment as to the use of copy books as blackboards gave rise to considerable debate. Prof. Hosmer was inclined to lay greater stress on position and movement, believing that correct form will follow naturally and easily. One successful teacher who writes left-handed convinced a good many that if a correct form is obtained the matter of position will become secondary and any available position will become secondary by habit.

"Psychology" was introduced by Prof. Hosmer in a very instructive lecture as the basic study of the teacher who is called upon to deal with all phases of the human mind and ought to be able to develop each along the lines of least resistance, suited to each particular case. This lecture took the form of class instruction, the entire Institute participating.

"Geography and Sand Modeling" was introduced by Prof. Freas of the Tillamook school with a class from his school and a Sand Model of Europe.

At the close of this lecture a vote showed that very few had tried this method of instruction but nearly all proposed to begin when they return to school work.

EVENING.
The exercises were public at the church and have been already reported.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.
A highly interesting and instructive paper on Hygiene was read by Mrs. May and discussed by the Institute.

"How to teach Spelling," by Prof. Hosmer, was the occasion of another earnest discussion.

"School Exhibitions and their Effect" called out a number of conflicting views.

Many minor topics from the Query Box took up the remainder of the time.

In addition to those mentioned Prof. Hevrit, Miss Swanson, Millon, Lena Pagenkopf, Blanche Sturgeon, Ponnell, Newell and others took an active part and all contributed to the successful conduct of the meeting.

AFTERNOON.
The afternoon was devoted to an excursion on Tillamook Bay under the auspices of Mr. B. C. Lamb and the Institute adjourned after a session both instructive and interesting.

The Cape Mears Road.
The light-house department has about decided to hire labor to build the road from the Cape Mears light to Tillamook river. Major Hanbury advertised for bids for this work twice. The bids received on the first occasion were "out of sight," nearly twice what was reasonable and proper. So they were all rejected and the job was re-advertised, and then no bids were received. It is supposed that the bank troubles which occurred about that time rendered it impossible for the class of contractors who bid on such jobs to get money to carry on the work. So it was proposed to the light-house board that the road, which is six and seven-eighths miles in length, be built with hired labor, and the material be furnished by the engineers, and this has been agreed to. There is an appropriation of about $5000 available for this road, which will probably be ample to complete it.

An Oregon Romance.

The Oregonian of Thursday contains a romantic account of the life of Mrs. Lewis who died mysteriously in South America some eighteen months ago. It states that Mrs. Lewis, whose maiden name was Mann, in her younger days lived in East Portland, where she was noted as one of the most beautiful and charming women in that community. She married an old man named Ralston, who died and left her with two children to provide for. After a short time she married Captain Lewis, a well known navigator on this coast, who took her with him on one of his voyages to South America. While at Callao Captain and Mrs. Lewis attended a ball where Mrs. Lewis met and became infatuated with an American named Dockendorf, who kept a large merchandise store at Lima. That very night a liaison was formed and the woman became the man's partner in a gigantic opium smuggling scheme. An Italian named Bacigalupi, and a New York named Taylor were also taken into the enterprise. The woman returned home but her infatuation with Dockendorf rendered her life with Lewis an unhappy one. Letters continued to arrive from Peru and finally on receiving an invitation to return to that country for her share of the profits of the opium smuggling, she deserted her husband and family and set sail for Callao. On Jan. 2, 1891, a few days after her arrival at Callao she was found dead in her apartment, by a physician who had been called to attend her by Dockendorf, Bacigalupi and Taylor, who claimed that in the course of a general conversation Mrs. Lewis complained of feeling ill and died before the doctor could be procured. The doctor was satisfied with the statement and gave a certificate that heart-disease was the cause of death. The remains were buried in a cemetery between Callao and Lima and Captain Lewis was notified of her death.

Mrs. Lewis had a policy on her life for $3000 in the Union Central Insurance Company payable to her husband in trust for her children, but the company contested its liability on the ground that the holder committed suicide. In September 1892, nine months after Mrs. Lewis's death, Bacigalupi was arrested on the charge of setting fire to his printing establishment and in the course of the investigation evidence was brought to light that prompted the authorities to arrest Dockendorf and Bacigalupi on the charge of murdering Mrs. Lewis, but there was not enough to insure conviction so the charges were withdrawn. On this evidence, however, Captain Lewis seeks the assistance of the courts to obtain the insurance money, and the case is now on trial in San Francisco. It is supposed that the woman was poisoned to prevent her from divulging the secrets of the opium smuggling ring.

The subject of this romantic story, after her marriage with Capt. Ralston resided at Garibaldi and was well known to the people who resided in Tillamook ten or twelve years ago. Capt. Ralston was much older than his wife, a Scotchman, tall, bent and grizzled and of an appearance as disagreeable as his nature really was and it was always a source of wonder how such an ill-assorted couple came together. While living a Garibaldi she formed the intrigue with Capt. Lewis and left her husband from whom she obtained a divorce some time afterwards. The statement that he died before her marriage to Lewis is a mistake.

My Nehalem Claim.
There's lots of wood in Oregon But isn't quite the same As the fir and cedar growing On my Nehalem claim— There's music on the rolling deep, There's grandeur on the sea; The music of the sighing pines Is good enough for me — While I some prefer the city's strife The turmoil and the rush, Give me the grand old evergreens, The woods at twilight hush For the forest's always homelike, Yes, I love each stately tree; And my cabin in the valley Is the dearest spot to me Grand Rapids, July 28th.—Astorian.

Rich Quartz Discovered.
Specimens of quartz were shown at Hillsboro taken from Clearwater creek, a branch of Gales creek, which to all appearances indicate rich deposits of copper and silver. Prospecting is now being carried on by Wiltrout brothers and others, and excitement is running high. Considerable prospecting was done in the same vicinity three years ago by T. M. Hires, of Forest Grove, but at that time no paying quartz was found and the prospecting was abandoned until spring, since which time the findings have been very encouraging.
