

Overheard on the Street.

The following was heard before election:
Bilkins—Yes, I'm glad you got the nomination. You'll get my vote, anyway, and I'll do what I can among the boys in our neighborhood.

Tompkins—All right, thank you.

TWO DAYS LATER.

Bilkins—Say, I don't believe Tompkins will get a vote in this precinct, do you?
Smithkins—I intend to vote for him.

Bilkins—Well, that'll be the only vote.

AFTER ELECTION.

(There was only one vote cast for Tompkins in the precinct.)

Bilkins—Well, old fellow, I see you got there. Glad of it. I voted for you, though I was the only supporter in the precinct.

Tompkins—Let's take a cigar. But, how is it, every man in your precinct says he voted for me.

Bilkins—Well, some people lie.

MORAL—When two hundred men come to you, un-solicited, and tell you they are going to vote for you, evidently somebody has lied.
