

Oretown.

A sad drowning accident occurred on Slab Creek August 7th. The creek was dammed up by sand just above the large rock near the beach, which caused the usual crossing place to be very deep and not safe at high tide.

A Mr. Shirley of Pleasant Home, Portland, and his uncle, not knowing the depth of the water, drove in, but on finding it too deep to cross, attempted to turn the buggy. Imagining they were about to be upset, they both jumped into the water. A fishing line became entangled around Mr. Shirley binding his arm to his body and preventing him from helping himself. When taken from the water life was extinct. He leaves a wife and a seven-months old child, his own age being about twenty-eight. The body was hauled to Sheridan that night and from there shipped to Portland where it was to be embalmed and then sent on to his people in Indianapolis.
