LONG LITIGATION.

Tried for Twenty Years to get Justice, but Still Fails.
The telegraphic dispatches recently contained the following:
David Jones, after 20 years of incessant litigation in the interior counties of the state, has now thrown down the gauntlet of legal warfare in the courts of San Francisco. In a suit filed, Jones demands judgement for $100,000 damages against Superior Judge McGarvey, of Mendocino county; J. A. Cooper and T. L. Carrothers, prominent attorneys of Ukiah, and Andrew Olsen, a private citizen. The basis of the action is an allegation that the plaintiff was unlawfully and unjustly subjected to 40 days' imprisonment for contempt of court. The imprisonment, on account of which he asks damages, grew out of an affidavit for a change of venue, in which he alleged that Judge McGarvey had once been an attorney for the defendants in a suit then pending, and that in such capacity he (McGarvey), had falsified records in order to win the case. Jones declared further that for years he has been held up to ridicule by the defendants, who have induced the Judge to render wrong decisions, and by malpractice, prevent his having the decisions reversed on appeal. He declared, also that he has been victimized by various attorneys, who were formerly in his employ, and mentions as among such attorneys, ex-Police Judge Rosenbaum, J. Taylor Rodgers, now Mayor Suro's secretary, and H. C. Wilson.
In filing his present suit of damages, Jones fought clear all legal advisers. He appears in the suit as his own attorney.
In an account regarding the same matter, the Examiner said:
"David Jones, a man who has been in litigation over Mendocino-county property for 20 years, has had transferred to this city a suit for $100,000 damages for imprisonment. In his long experience with the courts he became adjudged guilty of contempt, which may have been bred by familiarity, and Judge McGarvey sent him to jail for forty days. The suit for damages is based on this imprisonment, and, with Judge McGarvey, Attorneys J. A. Cooper and T. L. Carrothers of Ukiah, and Nils Iverson and Andrew Olsen, lumbermen, are made defendants.

Jones began by suing Iverson for property which he lost by mortgage, and litigation has been his fortune ever since."
Mr. Jones is the father of Jones Bros., formerly owning the livery stable in Tillamook.

From Neighboring Exchanges.

At the residence of the bride's parents Hon. and Mrs. Hughes, on Friday, at 3 o'clock p. m. Margaret Grace Hughes and Gene E. Larimore were married, Dr. Thos. McClelland officiating. LAKE NICARAGUA

A TILLAMOOKER'S EXPERIENCE THERE.

Alfred Deane, of Bay City, was captain of a small sailing schooner which plied the water of Lake Nicaragua as far back as 1857. Captain Deane is of English birth, and being a sailor, was adventurous, visiting different parts of the world, and went to Nicaragua over 40 years ago. He is now living a retired life in Bay City, and has been a resident of this county many years. He related some of his experience to the HEADLIGHT a few days ago.

Mr Deane says that his schooner was the first that ever made trips across the lake, and at that time there was a transportation line that landed at Groytown, at the mouth of the San Juan river, the outlet of the lake, and passengers ascended the river in small boats, sailed to the northwest end of the lake in his schooner, and after a trip of a few miles over a low ridge of hills came to the Pacific Ocean, and were transferred to another steamer line which carried passengers to San Francisco.

He says the lake is a magnificent body of water, and has several beautiful islands. It is 128 feet above the level of the oceans, and is fed by numerous streams of clear, sparkling water from the adjacent mountains. The only outlet is the San Juan river which empties into the Caribbean sea on the east. The waters of the lake are pure and cool, being good for drinking water.

Many of the rivers which empty into the lake are navigable, and there is another small lake, Managua, at the head of Lake Nicaragua, about 25 feet higher, which has an outlet into the larger body of water. The San Juan river has several rapids which prevent large boats navigating it until locks are established.

The proposed Nicaragua canal will follow the San Juan river most of the way, though on its lower course the canal will leave the river and an artificial harbor will be made near the mouth of the river. This is to avoid the shifting sand bars. A cut of about 15 miles will be necessary across a low range of hills to connect the lake with the Pacific, and locks will be necessary on both ends of the route, but Mr. Deane thinks the route perfectly practicable. He says the country is very rich, and produces immense growths of vegetation without irrigation. It is remarkably healthy considering that it is in the tropics, and is sure to become a prosperous country when the canal is built. There is plenty of fine mahogany, logwood, and other valuable forest products besides a profusion of wild tropical fruits, too numerous to mention. Coffee, sugar cane, and many other products useful to man, grow to perfection.

Wild game is abundant, and Mr. Deane relates some thrilling experiences while hunting. He says he was hunting wild cattle on one of the islands, and was making his way slowly through a path or trail in a dense jungle, when he started to step over what he thought to be a small log in his path. He was terror stricken when he saw it was a huge boa constrictor, and he stepped back and put a rifle ball through the immense snake. It crawled slowly on, and Captain Deane did not stay to see how long it was, though it must have been over twenty feet. Its large size and sluggish movements were caused, Mr. Deane says, by its having gorged itself on a deer or calf. The Captain went home without any meat.

At another time he ran from a monster snake which he saw by the road side, but afterward learned that the snake was dead, having been shot previously by a party of hunters.

The large Honduras turkey, and deer are so plentiful that a man can go out and kill them with a club. Several kinds of fine fish are found in the lake. Mr. Deane says he saw on the islands quaint old ruins and statuary, in a good state of preservation, which are said to be as old as the ruins of Egypt, and the hieroglyphics on them are similar to the Egyptian hieroglyphics.

During his stay there he was sick but once, with a prevalent malarial fever, and though he lay for days in a little coop without help, he finally recovered with the attention of an old Indian. Those who are strong and healthy and use quinine liberally until they are acclimated, have little to fear of the climate, and the natives live to be 150 years old. It is much more healthful than at Panama, where the dreaded yellow fever and cholera is never absent. The climate of Nicaragua is much drier than at Panama.

Mr. Deane is a modest, unassuming man, and is not anxious to parade his experiences, but if properly drawn out can relate some wonderful tales, adhering to the truth, we believe, of the remarkable region which is soon to become well known and play an important part in the commerce of the world.
