FACTS ABOUT SILVER

FREE COINAGE AT 16 TO 1 MEANS MONOMETALLISM.

Purchasing Power the True Test of Actual and Relative Values—Duty of the Government In Maintaining a Parity of Gold and Silver.

Secretary of the Treasury Carlisle, in his Covington speech on May 20, stated plainly and concisely the exact meaning of Bryan-Bland-Harvey free coinage. He said:

Free and unlimited coinage of full legal tender silver dollars at the ratio of 16 to 1 means that our law shall be so changed that any owner of silver bullion may send it to the mints and have it coined, at the public expense, into dollars each containing 412½ grains of standard silver, the dollars when coined to be delivered to the owner of the bullion, and all the people of the United States to be compelled by law to receive them as dollars in the payment of debts, although not intrinsically worth more than 50 cents each. The 25 8-10 grains of standard gold contained in a gold dollar is worth 100 cents, or the equivalent of 100 cents, all over the world, in silver standard countries as well as in gold standard countries, and it is worth just as much before it is coined as afterward, but the 412½ grains of standard silver contained in a silver dollar are not worth anywhere in the world more than about 50 cents. Or, to put the statement in a different form, 16 pounds of silver cannot be exchanged for 1 pound of gold anywhere in the world, but it requires about 32 pounds of silver to procure 1 pound of gold everywhere. But some one may say that this is not a fair statement, because it measures the value of silver by gold. The answer to this objection is that the statement does not attempt to measure the value of either of the metals, but simply to compare them, one with the other, and that for the purpose of making the comparison the value of gold is determined by its purchasing power in the markets of the world, and the value of silver is determined in the same way. Sixteen pounds of silver bullion will purchase only about one-half the quantity of commodities anywhere that one pound of gold bullion will purchase, and this purchasing power is the true test of their actual and relative values.

In the United States 16 pounds of silver, coined into dollars, will now purchase as much as a pound of gold coins, but this would not be the case under a system of free and unlimited coinage on individual account. The coinage of silver dollars here has been limited by law for the purpose of preventing an excessive issue, and they have been coined by the government on its own account and paid out for public purposes as dollars of full value, and consequently the government is bound by every consideration of good faith, to say nothing of the positive declarations contained in the statutes, to keep them as good as gold, or, in other words, to maintain the parity of the two metals, and this it has done and will continue to do as long as the present system exists. But if the present system is to be abolished and a new one established, so that private individuals and corporations can have their own bullion coined at the public expense and have the coins delivered to them for their private use, the government would be under no obligation whatever, legal or equitable, to keep them as good as gold, and, in fact, it would be impossible for it to do so, because the coinage would be unlimited, and the volume of silver in circulation would become so great in proportion to the gold the government could procure that the attempt would necessarily fail. The most extreme advocates of free coinage have not yet ventured to suggest that the government would be under any obligation to guarantee or maintain the value of silver dollars coined without charge for private parties, and without such guarantee it is clear the dollar would be worth no more than the commercial value of the bullion contained in it, just as the Mexican dollar is now. I admit that if the United States could coin without charge to the owners all the silver in the world available for coinage purposes, 412½ grains of standard silver, in bullion, would be worth as much in this country as a silver dollar, but the real question is, What would the silver dollar itself be worth? That it will not be equal to our present unit and standard of value is not only admitted, but openly urged as one of the chief arguments in favor of its free coinage.

Everywhere the people are being told that under free coinage it will require twice as many dollars to procure any given quantity of commodities as are required now, and this means, of course, that the money will be only one-half as valuable as it is now. When the public judgment is finally passed upon this subject, I think it will be found that the people of the United States are determined not to have a depreciated dollar, whether it be gold, silver or paper. They are undoubtedly entitled to have for use in their business just as good money as any other people in the world have, and no political party that attempts to deprive them of it will ever enjoy their confidence or receive their suffrages.

Metal Has No "Rights."

The "rights of silver," "we demand 'the right' to have our silver coined into legal tender dollars," are samples of the way in which silverites regard the white metal as a being with rights. But they are mistaken. A metal can have no "rights," and it is merely playing with words to talk of enforcing them. Whether we shall have free coinage and the silver standard or limited coinage on a parity with gold is matter to be decided according as the best interests of the whole people may determine. Nothing is to be gained by pretending that in maintaining a stable currency we are depriving something or some people of "rights."

Regular Soldiers Coming.

It is reported that a troop of regular cavalry, consisting of over 50 officers and men, from Vancouver Barracks is on its way to Tillamook via the Forest Grove route. At last report the men were camped at Walt Smith's waiting for the baggage wagon which was delayed by some mishap, caused perhaps by the difficulty experienced in turning the sharp curves with a six mule team and and a heavy load. The men are said to be in light maretime order on the way to our beaches for a pleasure trip, and will probably reach this city sometime today. This is the first troop of regular soldiers that has ever come to Tillamook and the appearance of so many mounted soldiers will be an unusual sight in this city.

LATER—They are here. E. troupe, 4th cavalry, Capt. F. Wheeler in command. They have gone to Netarts to camp.

Pianos and Organs.

The Wiley B. Allen Co., of Portland, Oregon, have shipped to Tillamook a fine stock of pianos and organs, which are to be sold at the same prices they sell for in the Co's., ware-rooms in Portland The instruments are on exhibition in the building two doors east of the HEADLIGHT office. They are samples of some of the finest pianos and organs ever shipped to Oregon. Mr. Frank Anrys, manager for the Wiley B. Allen Co., will be at the Alderman, in Tillamook, for a short time, and will sell the instruments for very low prices, and on easy installments.

COHN & COMPANY,

YOU don't want a coat that will rip up the back the first time you put it on, and you don't want goods that fade out on a few months. What you want is some good quality, well-made clothing, something that will wear well and look well for a long time. We guarantee that we can fit you and give you better satisfaction than if you sent away to the so-called tailoring establishments. They do not make clothes to order generally, but take your measure and select something to fit you as near as they can. That is why so many fail to get fits in sending away. You can see our goods, try them on, and judge for yourself. You don't have to buy them unless they suit you, and you do have to pay all or part in advance if you send away, and what you pay you don't get back even if they don't fit.

We keep gents' furnishing goods, ladies' underwear, dress goods and trimmings. A full line of boots and shoes, hats and caps. See us before marketing your produce.
