BUNYAN ON SILVER.

Now, at the farther side of that plain was a little hill called Lucre, and in that hill a silver mine, which some of them had formerly gone that way, because of the rarity of it, had turned aside to see; but, going too near the brink of the pit, the ground being deceitful under their boots, and they were slain. Some, also, had been maimed there and could not to their dying day be their own men again.

Then I saw in my dream that a little off the road, over against the silver mine, stood Demas, gentlemanlike, to call to passengers to come and see, who said to Christian and his fellow, "Ho; turn aside hither, and I will show you a thing."

Christian—What things so deserving as to turn us out of the way?
Demas—Here is a silver mine and some digging in it for treasure. If you will come, with a little pains you may provide richly for yourselves.

Then Christian called to Demas, saying: "Is not this place dangerous? Hath it not hindered many in their pilgrimage?"
Demas—Not very dangerous except to those that are careless.
But what he blushed as he spoke.

Christian—What is thy name? Is it not by which I have called thee?
Demas—Yes, my name is Demas. I am the son of Abraham.
Christian—I know you. Gehazi was your great-grandfather and Judas your father, and you have trod their steps.

MUTINY IN THE SILVERITE ARMY.

The Several Factions Are Each Pulling in Different Directions.

It is amusing to watch the struggles of the silverites with their friends and allies, the Populists and other flat money advocates. As the men who believe in making a dollar half silver and half flat find their principal support among believers in dollars wholly flat, they try to avoid offending the latter by opposing unlimited greenbacks and similar cheap money schemes. But an attempt to convert the Populist party to a platform of the single plank of free coinage at 16 to 1 has split that party in two wings, which are now getting ready to fight each other. The men who want government loans on land and farm products will not be satisfied with a currency scheme which will only benefit the silver mine owners. While the silverites fear to endorse the wild money notions of the Populists lest they drive away supporters who are not ready to swallow all the third party's nostrums, the Coxeyites are taking fun at them as men who have not the courage to follow their cheap dollar arguments to their logical end—Populism.

The result will be that the silverites will have to decide between such of their followers who really believe that free silver would give us sound money and those who want unlimited issues of cheap money based on nothing. If they decide for the latter, they will lose the support of all the believers in common honesty and property rights who have been deceived into favoring free coinage. If they go against flat paper money, they will lose the aid of the Populists. In either case the cause of sound money will gain.

The Safe Basis For Silver Coinage.

A sign that the silverites are beginning to realize that free coinage at 16 to 1 is an impossibility is found in the demand by some silver organs for the coinage at that ratio of all silver produced in the United States. But this scheme is just as absurd as the proposal to open our mints to the world's stores of silver. No tariff would be able to keep foreign silver out of this country if it was valued here at a higher rate than its commercial value. Even though the importation of bullion was prohibited, it would be easy to bring in silver tableware, etc., which would be melted down. The idea of coining all United States silver will not stand examination. The only safe basis is to coin as much as can be maintained at a parity with gold. As soon as our supply of the latter metal increases to a proper amount we may venture to coin more silver. But not till then.

Want Silver Monometallism.

Some of the silverites are profuse in their protests that they only want bimetallicism and do not wish to cease using gold as a standard of values or to drive it out of circulation. But it is only necessary to read the papers and speeches in which the free coinage doctrine is preached to see that, while pretending to favor using gold, they really want silver alone. The wholesale denunciation of gold as "money of the rich," as "a standard which robs debtors for the benefit of creditors," etc., shows that it is not merely love of silver, but hatred of gold, which inspires these attacks. Why not be honest, Messrs. Silverites, and admit that in advocating a policy which, on the confession of that eminent bimetallicist, President E. B. Andrews, "would drive all our gold out of the country," you are working for the silver standard?

WHICH IS RIGHT?

Two Assertions of the Silverites That Are Slightly Contrasting.

The two legs on which the free silver argument lamenly limps are two assertions which flatly contradict each other. The first is the statement that with free coinage at 16 to 1 the commercial value of silver will advance until 16 ounces of silver will equal in value one ounce of gold. This claim is backed up by the oft repeated charge that it was the alleged devaluation of silver in 1873 which caused the value of that metal to fall, and it is urged that free coinage would at once restore its old value.

The second assertion of the silverites is their claim that free coinage would stop the fall in prices which they all insist is due to our financial policy. They have won the support of the farmers solely because they denounced our present currency system as one which makes money scarce and dear and have promised that free coinage will make money cheap and plentiful. In fact, their very strongest plea for unlimited silver is their claim that it would double the prices of farm products by measuring them in cheaper money. And if it would do so it certainly could not help the farmer.

Here then are the plain statements of the silverites:

Free coinage will increase the value of silver double the price of our so that it will be all products by as much as dear as it is using them in the now. Putting the government's stamp on our plentiful metal and Dollar on 42 1/2 grains will enable debtors to pay their debts with equal in value to 16 1/2 grains of gold. They would have to give now.

Which is right?

Rhyme of the Ancient Populist.
It was an ancient Populist,
His beard was long and gray,
And penetrated by his list
He had his little say;
"This is the age of gold," he said,
"Gold for bread and gold for food,
Gold for the sick and gold for fun,
Gold for all things in the sun."
Then with a smile
He shook his head,
"Just wait awhile,"
He shyly said,
"When we get in and run the state,
We'll tackle gold; we'll legislate,
We'll pass an act
And make a fact
By which these goldings will be whacked
Till they're as cold
As is their gold."
We're going to make a statute law by which
I'll be decreed
That standards be abolished, for a standard
Favors greed.
This is the country of the free, and free this land shall be
As soon as we, the people, have our opportunity.

Can pay who has to pay a bill
Or anything the man can make,
The tailor? Let him take his coat
And pay his notes,
Or if perchance
He's long on parts
Let trousers be
His s. s. d.
The baker? Let his landlord take
His rent in cake
Or anything the man can bake,
And if a plumber wants a crumb
He may unto the baker come
And plumb.
A joker needing hats or cloaks
Can go and pay for them with jokes,
And so on. What a fellow's got
Shall pay for things that he has not.
If beggars' rage were such, you'd see
No longer any beggary.
In short, there'd be no poverty.
"A splendid scheme," quoth I.
"But stay!
What of the nation's credit, pray?"
"Ha, ha! Ho, ho!" he loudly roared,
"We'll leave that problem to the Lord.
And if he fails to keep us straight
Once more we'll have to legislate
And so create,
Confounding greed,
As much of credit as we need."
