

SILVER WILL NOT DOWN.

Rest Assured of This, Notwithstanding the Lying of the Gold Organs.

Ever since President Cleveland took the field in opposition to free coinage—that is to say, from the day he wrote his letter to the Chicago bankers and business men—the gold monometallists have been greatly encouraged. Of course it was to be expected that the official and congressional cuckoos and the personal and political parasites of Mr. Cleveland would echo his sentiments and join the administration propaganda for "sound money."

The first step was to organize a literary bureau. While Cleveland's Chicago letter was still fresh the country was flooded with pamphlets and leaflets proclaiming the new gospel of "sound money."

It is always noticeable when such a literary and journalistic campaign is being forced forward by the use of money and is being directed from some central point that there is a dull sameness in the work. Hence it should not be surprising, for instance, that all the goldbug papers in the country are saying and have been saying for two months and more that the "silver craze" is dying out; that the movement for independent free coinage "is on its last legs"; that the cause of "sound money" is sweeping the country, and all that.

The movement for a return to the double monetary standard has also made great strides in France. It is well known that the French government is in hearty sympathy with the movement for a conference which found authoritative expression in the imperial diet of Germany.

A dispatch stated yesterday that the weekly statements of the Bank of France show a steady decrease in its gold holdings and a steady increase in its silver holdings. This certainly does not indicate that that great financial institution, one of the greatest in the world, has any fear that silver will be discarded, as the gold monometallists proclaim.

The truth is that the cause of bimetalism is stronger in Europe today than it has been at any time since the demonetization of silver. And in the United States the demand among the people for the restoration of free coinage is more urgent, more widespread and more intelligent than ever before. Where one man understood the question ten years ago or three years ago ten understand it now.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Morrison on the Fence.

The silver Democrats [of Illinois] are represented as waiting anxiously for some friendly sign from Hon. William R. Morrison, but they will wait in vain. "Horizontal Bill," as Mr. Morrison is familiarly called, has already said enough to indicate that he is bowed down in a worshipful attitude before the golden image which Wall Street has set up. The silver Democrats of Illinois had better rest their faith on Hinrichsen or Altgeld or Fithian or some other of their numerous advocates of bimetalism.

The man who sits on the fence and watches the contest now going on in the Democratic party between the friends of the gold standard and the friends of bimetalism cannot expect the confidence of either element because he lacks either a knowledge of the question or the courage to speak his sentiments. A president exerts a large influence on legislation through the patronage which he distributes and through the veto power. We cannot afford to take chances on a man who is afraid to express himself upon the leading questions of the day.—Omaha World-Herald.

Is Up Until Settled Right.

"The silver question will never be dropped in America until free coinage is passed," said Senator Vest of Missouri to a representative of the Associated Press at Carlsbad.

"The people of the east," he continued, "believe it will be dropped as business revives, but the overwhelming sentiment in all the west and south is in favor of free coinage. I believe it will surely be passed in time. The whole of the money power of the east and the banks everywhere will undoubtedly try to furnish a striking object lesson. Easterners say we in the west and south do not understand the question. But there never was a question more fully discussed or more carefully studied. There is not a fully prepared to discuss intelligently all the bearings of the question, and the same state of affairs exists throughout the southwest."

GOLD THEORISTS IN A PANIC.

Frightened by the Popular Cry, "Restore the Silver Dollars of Our Daddies!"

Exchange editors of all newspapers—that is, those of the staff charged with the delicate duties of daily examining the whole press of the Union and clipping from journals of all shades the tone of public sentiment regarding politics, finance, education and topics of passing interest—agree that not the old slavery question nor the tariff question has so aroused public attention in all sections of the country as the pending questions concerning the future of silver coinage and the restoration of a joint metallic standard.

It was the action of President Pierce and his cabinet toward territorial slavery that really intensified the feeling which six years later resulted in the election of Lincoln, and it is the action of President Cleveland in regard to gold monometallism that has intensified public attention to the great national wrong which was perpetrated by the demonetization of silver and by the fresh attempt to still further discredit that metal for coin. Like as the rising feeling of the north in favor of antislavery excited the southern press and orators to angry recrimination and threats, so the rising feeling in favor of the constitutional rights of silver currency seems to excite the alarm and threats of the advocates of the Cleveland gold standard. So that of late newspaper organs of gold monometallism have turned their original insolent and contemptuous tone toward silver advocates into threats and some pretense of argument, which demonstrates that they begin to appreciate the courage, logic and precedents of their silverite opponents, and to be alarmed at the increasing opposition among the electoral masses to the specious plans of the gold interest for "sound money."

Already political banners at the west echo the popular cry, if homely, yet eloquent, "Restore the silver dollars of our daddies!" There are very living merchants and tradesmen who knew the financial times preceding 1873, when silver coin stood on equal terms with gold coin, and yet scarcely one of those veterans is a follower of President Cleveland and his foreign allies in promotion of the single gold standard money.

In the revolutions of the whirligig of time the Republican party has gone back upon the financial plank of the last Harrison platform. That plank is now returning to plague the Republicans. And it will do no harm at the threshold of a new political campaign for Democrats to remind their opponents of that plank, which was stolen from Jeffersonian and Jacksonian books, and which constituted the only popular leaf that the Republican campaign book of 1893 had. It was as follows:

"The American people, from tradition and interest, favor bimetalism and demand the use of both gold and silver as standard money, with such restrictions and under such provision, to be determined by legislation, as will secure the maintenance of the parity of values of the two metals, so that the purchasing and debt paying power of the dollar, whether of silver, gold or paper, shall be at all times equal."—New York Mercury.

Case of Financial Chills.

Under the financial derangement we are now going through the country must suffer as a patient with chills and fever. The demand on gold will rise and fall as the markets for gold alternately loosen and tighten. Prices of property will rise and fall accordingly, but ever with a tendency downward. Like the progress of a fatal disease, the impulses of nature at intervals resuscitate the patient and hold out a deceptive promise of improvement.

Each time a government gold loan is made with, say, the Rothschilds behind the treasury temporary confidence will be restored and prices will advance. The government supplying itself with gold causes the gold hoarders in the United States to let their gold out. But as the golden sand in the hourglass at Washington runs out again, as it must, a scare returns, gold hoarding begins again, the demand for gold increases, and prices correspondingly fall. The end is national bankruptcy. To correct this system is national prosperity. Every moment's delay endangers the safety of the republic.—Harvey and Hor-Harvey Debate.

Are We a Big Coward?

The New York World makes this statement: "Recent statistics show that the total 'banking power,' as it is called, of the world is $4,000,000,000, or $20,000,000,000. Of this North America, mainly this country, controls $1,300,000,000, while all Europe, including Great Britain, France, Germany, Belgium and the Netherlands, all the great 'capitalists' nations, control but $2,500,000,000. In other words, this country holds about half as much of the world's 'banking power' as all Europe combined, and greatly more than any single country in Europe or the world." Then, why in the name of common sense should we pursue a timid policy and act as though we were a pauper nation dependent upon the financial whims of other countries?—National Watchman.

Too Much For the "Leaders."

When the smoke of battle rolled away from the scene of the free for all silver convention held in Memphis in June, such Democratic leaders as Senators Jones of Arkansas, Harris of Tennessee and Turpie of Indiana realized that they had been the participants in a movement that tended in its effect toward the breaking up of the Democratic party. The Populists had captured the "free silver" or "bust" Democrats had captured the convention, body and boots, and had shaped its resolutions to this end, and it was all these leaders could do to prevent a straight out declaration that the free silver people would bolt any party not declaring itself to be in favor of their pet scheme.—Memphis Special in New York World.

SALVATION IS FREE!!!

Those of you who have starved on the wind-swept plains of Kansas, watched your crops wither and die for the want of moisture, and if they do live, see them eaten by grasshoppers or chinchbugs, saw your potatoes and gardens destroyed by gophers and prairie dogs—those of you who have faced the famine in Nebraska, burned corn to keep from freezing to death, fed your cattle nine months out of the year—those who have weathered the withering blasts of the Dakotas, had your ears and feet frozen off, shivered by a red hot stove or toyed with the death dealing zephyrs when the thermometer marked 60 degrees below zero—you who have braved the uncertain and changeable freaks of old Boreas in Iowa and Minnesota, dug through snow banks to get from your house to your barnyard, or witnessed your buildings go up in a cyclone,—you who have shaken with the ague on the Wabash, coughed your lungs out in Chicago, wrestled with yellow fever in Memphis, or sneezed yourself silly on the alkali plains of Texas—saw your buildings, household goods, and crops floating placidly down the swollen Mississippi, saw your fodder rot in the shock, the weevil taking your wheat and the devil getting your nearest relatives—you who have seen crops fail seven years in succession, passed through a "busted" oil boom in Pennsylvania, the devastations of war in the South, the strikes in New York city, or tried to eke out a living on the yellow clay hills of Vermont—you who have worked hard for years, yet poor, everything mortgaged but the old woman and children, and still living from hand to mouth—you who are backsliders, weary of well doing, and discouraged in trying to earn a living honestly—if all these and many other afflictions have been your lot, why, at one fell swoop end all your troubles by coming to Oregon, and to Tillamook, where you will find absolution from most of the evils of the world.
