Outside parties who desire this summer to visit the best trout fishing ground in America will do well to post up on the advantages of Tillamook.

Why wouldn't a shingle mill pay in this vicinity? There isn't a shingle mill in the entire county. The machinery is simple and inexpensive and can be operated by any one with ordinary mechanical skill.

We understand that a petition is soon to be circulated in this city praying the Town Council to tear up all the side walks, for the reason that they interfere with the growth of the grass needed to support the chickens and cows that are allowed to run at large.

Now is the time to make garden. Be sure and properly enrich the soil, spade deep, pulverize the soil well, plant only the best of seeds. Spare neither toil nor expense for by and by you (or neighbor's hens) will want something to eat.

The HEADLIGHT expects soon to start in on an extensive write up of this County, and will be pleased to have persons in different sections of the county volunteer to write up their localities. The more information we get the more value will the write up have to the people of the county.

The less a man knows usually, the more egotistical he becomes. Shut him up in a coop for a time and he soon begins to imagine that the boundaries of his coop form the horizon of all that is knowable in the universe. Such men may not be to blame for their ignorance but their blowing sometimes makes them very ridiculous to those who have been outside of the coop.

The people in the south end of the county will greatly rejoice over the announcement made elsewhere in these columns that the steamer Garfield is making arrangements to go into the coasting trade this summer. Around the Siletz, Nestucca Bay and Netarts it to be found some of the richest country on the whole Pacific Coast. This fact has long since been discovered by numerous settlers, who need only a market to make them amongst the most prosperous of our people. This market will, now, to a great extent, be afforded them, at least during the summer months by the Garfield, which will connect here with the steamer Chilkat for Portland and San Francisco. We sincerely trust that the enterprise may be found profitable both for the owners of the Garfield and the shippers along the route.

Many of the readers of the Oregonian have found much fault with that paper lately on account of its attitude on the tariff question, and especially the wool schedule, which that journal contends should not be as high as it was under the McKinley bill. We think that some of the critics of the Oregonian have not looked at the question from all sides, but only from the standpoint of the wool grower. In making a tariff schedule on any article its bearings on the consumer as well as the producer must be considered. Comparatively few of our people produce wool, but all use it. The wool growing industry has been so thoroughly demoralized by the democratic party that for some years to come this country will not produce as much wool as it will require, and considerable wool will have to be imported. The tariff on wool will therefore, until the wool-growing industry can recuperate, somewhat raise the price of all woolen products. A very high tariff would so increase the price as to make it a burden.

The Oregonian is right. Too high a tariff will result in a revolution, and in free wool, finally, while a moderate tariff will protect the industry, and soon revive it to such an extent that we shall again be able to produce all the wool that we use.

The little town of Kalama is still greatly excited over the alleged miracle of a woman formerly illiterate having suddenly by miraculous power been made to read and the oldest part of the whole is that a couple of educated preachers pretend to believe it a genuine miracle. If the good Lord has ceased to work along ordinary lines, and concluded to give the people a short cut to knowledge, the churches may as well dismiss their college professors and close their colleges and universities. If a few moments prayer accomplishes as much as years of weary study, why not make the prayer, fill up with wisdom, and spend the rest of the time fishing. We are told that God is no respecter of persons, and if he crams one person's cranium suddenly full of knowledge, why not do the same for all. The fact of the case is the whole thing is a humbug, and the claim of a miracle in the case is far more hurtful to the cause of christianity than it is helpful.

Senators By the People.

Senator Turpie, of Indiana, raised a new pertinent point in favor of the election of United States senators by popular vote in his discussion of that question in the senate. Because of the failure of the legislatures of two states to elect senators, the people of those states are deprived of their constitutional right to adequate representation in one branch of congress. The responsibilities for this fact rests on the legislatures of these states. The voters who choose the legislators didn't and couldn't know that they would fail to perform their duty, and consequently the people are made to suffer because of a dereliction for which they are not to blame.

If the senators are elected by direct vote of the people, such a condition could not arise. Each party could put a candidate in the field as they do for governor, and other state officers and one or the other could be elected, either by majority or plurality. It would probably make no difference in the political complexion of the senate, but in all probability it would make a very material difference in the moral and mental character of that body. The parties would be compelled to nominate fit and deserving men in every state in which the margin between the two parties is narrow, and thus the country would secure the benefit of a higher and better senatorial standard.

What Senator Turpie said of the influence of various kinds of trusts and corporations of various kinds in the election of senators under the present system has been said before, but it can't be repeated too frequently or with too much emphasis. There have been senators chosen within the past decade—and they have sat and voted in the upper house of congress—who were nothing more nor less than attorneys on the floor for the corporations that bought their election. Such men do not represent the people. They have no interest in common with the constituency they misrepresent. Under the system of election by direct vote they could never have been elected and probably wouldn't have the temerity to ask an election. That is sufficient reason why the existing method should be abolished.—Kansas City Star.

Sectionalism is Dead

The republican party has gone into power under new conditions, and in the midst of the most serious business and financial emergencies the people have ever been called on to face. For the first time in its history, the republican party is on trial on issues not concerned with sectionalism or the prejudices growing out of the war. Such sectionalism as now exists is purely geographical, and the issues which are to decide the fate of the republican party are purely economic.

The first is the tariff. Will higher duties, more protection, restore prosperity? Mr. McKinley has said so, and the republicans have pledged themselves to it. Well, the people are waiting the result. Then there is currency reform. What are the republicans going to do about it? That remains to be seen.

Meantime, why should any reputable newspaper go slinking around "opposing" Mr. McKinley? A million arguments are not equal to one event. If the tariff restores prosperity, everybody except a few magwumps will say that the end justified the means. If protection fails why then it is a dead issue, and the republican party will die with it.

Under the circumstances, there is no reason why the newspapers should "oppose" Mr. McKinley.

Atlanta Constitution, Dem.

The esteem in which Mr. Gladstone has been held in this country for a generation has been many times illustrated, but never more forcibly than by the expressions of the intelligent press upon his late presentation of the Eastern question. The New York Times expresses the enlightened public sentiment of the nation when it says that "it is a great thing that the grand old man of 88 should become in his extreme age the voice, not only of England but of all Europe, of Christendom, of civilization," upon this question.—Oregonian.

An exchange says that apples eaten just before retiring are a great help to digestion. We tried it and about 2 o'clock we dreamed that a fire-red dragon with a pea green tail and eyes as big as a soup plate was curving us up with a meat-saw and a sword. We finally awoke, and found our good wife fanning us with a bed-lat and trying to get the baby out of the coal scuttle, where we had put it to keep the dragon from getting it. Hang the apples; give us prunes.—Budget.

The last two attempts to tow logs from the lower Columbia river to San Francisco have been so successful that another big raft will be built this season at Stella for the long ride down the coast. Oregon has logs for export and there are plenty of men who stand ready and willing to do the work. It is encouraging to note that this scheme for transporting logs has proven to be feasible.

NOTICE OF SHERIFF'S SALE.

In the County Court of the State of Oregon for Tillamook County, Elizabeth Page, Plaintiff, vs. Wm. T. Sax, T. E. Sax, Linda Sax, Schmitzler, Sam'l Sax Jr. and James Sax, Defendants.
Notice is hereby given that by virtue of an execution duly issued out of the above-named court on the 8th day of March, 1897, to enforce a judgment against the above named defendants and in favor of the above named plaintiff, and to me directed and delivered as Sheriff of Tillamook County, Oregon, commanding me to levy upon and sell the personal property of said defendants, or if a sufficient amount cannot be found, then upon the real property of said defendants, to satisfy the said judgment, to wit: the sum of $135.00 now due on said judgment with interest at the rate of 8 per cent per annum from the 1st day of March, 1897, and the further sum of $22.75—now cost. Now, therefore, after due levy having been made and by virtue of said execution I will sell at public auction for cash in hand, at the court house door at Tillamook, Tillamook county, Oregon, at the hour of 10 o'clock in the forenoon on SATURDAY the 25th day of April, 1897, the following described real property to wit: The North east quarter of Section Fifteen, Township Two South Range Nine West, of the Willamette Meridian in Tillamook county, Oregon; to satisfy said judgment and cost.
Dated this 23rd day of March 1897.
J. H. JACKSON,
Sheriff of Tillamook County, Oregon.

TAX NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that the assessment roll for the year 1896 is now in my hands for collection.

Did you ever stop to think what digestion really means? It means simply that your stomach is tired. If our legs are tired, we ride. The horse and steam engine do the work. Why not give your stomach a ride; that is, let something else do its work. Food can be digested outside of the body. All plants contain digestive principles which will do this. The Slaker Digestive Cordial contains digestive principles and is a preparation destined to rest the stomach. The Slakers themselves have such unbounded confidence in it that they have placed 10 cent sample bottles on the market, and it is said that even so small a quantity proves beneficial in a vast majority of cases. All druggists keep it.

Laxol is the best medicine for children. Doctors recommend it in place of Castor Oil.

Notice to Taxpayers.

The law requires that each male between the ages of 21 and 50 years living within the county shall pay a poll tax of one dollar ($1) at the time of assessment, and if not so paid, to be reported to the sheriff of the county, with added costs for collection, at once. The law allows no exemption for poll tax, except to active members of the Oregon National Guard, and all active firemen who have been members of any company, for one year next preceding the time of assessment, and exempt firemen. That there may be no cause for complaint I ask that each person liable to poll tax be prepared to pay the same to the Assessor, or his deputy, at the time of making the assessment. I ask the aid of every person in the county, that the law may be strictly complied with. Persons exempt will be required to show their certificate of exemption.
