GENERAL NEWS.

GLEANED FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD
Conveyed in Short and Pithy Paragraphs.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—J. I. Hooper was today appointed postmaster at Oretown, in Tillamook county, Ore.

WASHINGTON, July 28.—President McKinley has promulgated the following important amendments in civil service rule No. 2:

"No removal shall be made from any position subject to competitive examination, except for just cause and upon written charges filed with the head of the department or other appointing office, and of which the accused shall have full notice and an opportunity to make defense."

NEW YORK, July 31.—The Herald prints the following from its correspondent with the insurgent army in Cuba: "I have received the following letter from General Castillo, addressed to the New York Herald:

"Our confidence in our final triumph is daily greater. During the last month with our moderate force, we had 32 severe combats with the enemy. We have applied explosives to trains, fought troops on the highways, taken towns, and our armies have been victorious everywhere. During the same months 23 persons fully armed who belonged to the Spanish army have joined our forces. Counting the regulars, guerrillas, volunteers and all civilians, I am in a position to assure you that our forces are more than ever flourishing and victorious."

"I was in Matanzas recently, and while there I witnessed a scene that reminded me of the stories of the treatment of slaves in Africa. I saw a Spanish inspector of police lash until they bled, feeble, tottering reconcentrados in order to force them to do government work. Matanzas is full of reconcentrados. Every night some of them die on the steps of theatres or in the hospitals. Except for private donations they are absolutely helpless. On July 14 a ship arrived with a cargo of tiles to be used for some government purpose. To unload the tiles the police pressed into service a great number of reconcentrados. They were too weak to work, too weak even to drag themselves down to the harbor. Some started to work, but had not strength enough to carry the tiles. Then it was that the police inspectors appeared and mercilessly beat women and old men for their inability to work."

SAN FRANCISCO, July 30.—Ellis Mills, the retired consul-general at Honolulu, arrived from the islands on the steamer Alameda. Mr. Mills was succeeded by William Hayward, and, with his wife, is on his way back to his home in Virginia. Speaking of political affairs in the islands Mr. Mills says:

"Annexation is now regarded universally by the people of Hawaii as a certainty. Their enthusiasm over the annexation is more intense now, if such a thing be possible, than it has ever been and almost everybody has an abiding faith in the happy result that they all wish for and anticipate. It is confidently expected that the whole matter will be settled when congress meets this fall."

WASHINGTON, July 30.—The Japanese government has accepted the offer by Hawaii to arbitrate the dispute between the two countries. The state department has been informed of the offer and its acceptance. The subjects of arbitration will include not only the difficulty over the landing of immigrants, but also will include other disagreements between the two countries, the most important of which is the Sake tax imposed upon a Japanese liquor largely imported and consumed by the Japanese in Hawaii.

CHICAGO, July 28.—A Times-Herald special from Washington says President McKinley is determined to secure currency reform legislation. To this end he will have the active co-operation of Secretary Gage. The currency commission bill passed by the house on the last day of the session is dead, and it is not likely the president will revive the project of having a monetary reform measure framed and recommended by a commission.

It is now planned that an administration plan shall be formulated during the summer and autumn and submitted to congress when it convenes in December. By the time Secretary Gage submits his first annual report to congress next December he will in all probability have a plan formulated, which may be submitted to the administration as a scheme of currency reform.

Arrested for Manslaughter.

Considerable excitement was caused in this community on Saturday morning by the announcement that a sheriff from Minnesota had arrested an escaped murderer and that he was confined in the county jail.

A HEADLIGHT reporter went out to investigate the matter. Going to the county jail, he found confined there, as the alleged murderer, a mild looking man about 35 years of age. The man's name is Fred E. Huntsinger, and to the reporter he gave the following account of the occurrence that finally led to his arrest:

"My name is Fred E. Huntsinger, commonly known as Eugene Huntsinger. I am a native of Minnesota and lived there until last year. The man's name for whose death I am held was Henry Stoddard. Stoddard was what is generally known as a hard case. He was a troublesome, quarrelsome fellow and a bully, and I had trouble with him when we both lived in Wisconsin. When I moved from Wisconsin to Crow Wing County, Minnesota I found that Stoddard had moved to the county and the same town, the town of Jenkins. When Stoddard found that I was in the place he at once began circulating false reports about me and against me, injuring my character, and alleging that he had 'done me up' on several occasions, and could and would do so again.

On Thanksgiving night 1895 there was a dance in the town of Jenkins, and, at the solicitation of my brother-in-law whom I was stopping, I went to the dance. Stoddard was there, and also his daughter, who is, I think, at the bottom of all this trouble.

When I got there I found that Stoddard had informed all his cronies that he intended whipping me that night. He was calling. He took off his coat pretending that he was uncomfortably warm and whetted up a couple of knives he had in his pocket, all the time boasting of what he would do to me. I finally saw there was no avoiding him and so I walked up to him and asked him whether or not he intended to attack me. He was standing in the door and outside. He said 'yes, you —' and sprang upon me, fastening his teeth in my forehead just above my right eye. We clinched and I threw him to the ground which was icy and hard frozen. We would have had it out then but were separated and several other of his cronies attacked me. When the row was quieted down Stoddard challenged me to meet him at 10 o'clock on the following morning and when the time came I started to do so but heard on the way that he was sick and so did not go. Stoddard died two weeks later, from what cause I do not know. I remained there in that town until March when I went to Dakota and from there I came to Oregon. My wife came in Oct. 1896 and found me at Sherwood, from Sherwood we came to Tillamook during October.

I have no fear of the outcome of the case, and I do not think there is a shadow of a chance for my conviction. I acted in self defense. My wife and child are at Oretown, and will remain there with my parents until the case is disposed of, which I hope will be soon. Stoddard's wife never blamed me for her husband's death, and I think that my arrest is the work of his daughter."

Sheriff O. P. Ericson, who had the prisoner in charge, showed the reporter his papers. They were regular in form and recited that Huntsinger was indicted by the grand jury of Crow Wing Co. Minn., Nov. 17th, 1896 (one year after the alleged crime was committed) for "manslaughter in the first degree." Mr. Ericson admitted that he had a hard time to get the county attorney to consent to allow him to come after Huntsinger, and that he had to threaten him with mandamus proceedings to compel him to do so. He finally got his papers, however, and arrived here last Friday. Sheriff Jackson looked into the matter and thought it of so little importance that he did not go personally to assist in the arrest. He deputized City Marshal Clyde Clements to go in his place and with Mr. Jones, of the Jones Bros. livery stable they went down to Woods. Here they found Constable Harrison Booth, and then returned to Oretown for their man. They found Huntsinger out fishing, and arrested him without difficulty, and after giving him an opportunity of bidding his family a sad farewell brought him to town and locked him up.

Sheriff Ericson seemed to be greatly impressed with the idea that he was in the wild and woolly west. He considered himself in imminent danger of his life and guarded constantly against possible rescue. He informed a HEADLIGHT reporter that when in a wild country like Tillamook he trusted no one save himself, and seemed to regard every man that he met as a possible desperado. Mr. Tuttle, with his fierce moustache, and bullet scars, received while doing duty as a deputy in Arizona, made an especially fearful impression on the mind of this quiet eastern sheriff, who is evidently a good fellow but possessed of exceedingly funny ideas regarding the west and the western people.

Sheriff Jackson smiled a quiet smile at the recital of the tale of the easterner's fears, but next day he had the Condyke fever worse than ever.
