Prof. Beggs' Entertainment.

The entertainment given by Prof. J. N. Beggs and his dancing class last Friday evening, drew a large audience, and was highly appreciated by all present. It opened with a grand march in which all the professor's pupils took part. The figures of the march are very pretty, and many of them were new to our people. The programme consisted altogether, of exhibitions, of fancy and ball room dancing.

Dorman Edwards delighted the audience, beyond measure, with his clever "Irish jig, done to perfection". Alice Peterson, Blanche Mc Nair, Lavina Jenkins, Annie Edie and Mary Jenkins danced the skirt dance, and did it beautifully.

The boys drill was one of the features of the occasion, and exhibited the utmost skill in their teacher and great diligence of application on the part of the boys, all of whom took part.

A drill for girls, participated in by Blanche Mc Nair, Hazel Mc Nair, Alice Peterson, Annie Edie, Mary Jenkins and Effie Stienhiller was very prettily rendered.

Exhibitions of the new style of Waltzing, and also the "Oxford Minne" were given by the Professor, with the clever little Misses Pearl Edie, Elbe Steinhiller and Hazel Mc Nair as partners.

After this, Blanche Mc Nair, Alice Peterson, Bessie Hunt, Katie Hiner, Nettie McKinley and Mary Jewki Hiner, another exhibition of the skirt dance gave.

One of the most enjoyable features of the evening, was the dancing of "Sailors Hornpipe", by Percy of the and Horace Patchen.

Little Hazel Mc Nair delighted her many friends by dancing a skirt dance "all by herself" and doing it well.

The entertainment closed with the "girls drill" and grand march. All did so exceedingly well that special mention would be unfair. Everybody agreed that Prof. Beggs had accomplished wonders with his class.

The entertainment was followed by a very enjoyable dance. Mrs. H. C. Stoddard furnished the music for both the entertainment and the dance.

MARRIED

Hughey—Childers, in Tillamook Ore. Nov. 14 at the office of and by Judge Sappington W. J. Hughey and Nellie L. F. Childers both of Tillamook.

BY TELEPHONE.

It was a very warm day near the close of August, and Virginia Allen stepped into a corner drug store to refresh herself with a soda.
A woman is never too warm or too fatigued to notice another woman's gown, and as Virginia waited at the soda counter her observant eyes took in every detail of the charming summer costume worn by a young woman who was standing at the telephone.
She was a very pretty woman, and her dainty gown of grass linen, with its touch of green ribbons here and there, became her exceedingly, as did her hat, a mass of sweet peas and green gauze, set well forward on her blond head.
Just now she was a bit out of temper. "Express 2,804," she called impatiently. And as she waited for the desired number she turned and looked at Virginia, who, quite overcome by the heat—or was it for some other reason—had seated herself at no great distance off and was welding a palm leaf fan energetically.
The pretty woman turned abruptly to the phone in response to a call. "Is this Express 2,804?" she said.
"It is Byron's number," Virginia muttered to herself. "I thought so."
The woman at the phone spoke again: "This is Mr. Curtis, is it not?" Virginia raised her head and scarcely disguised the fact that the conversation interested her.
"Yes, I am Miss Clevebrook," continued the woman in the linen gown. Then, "Yes, please."
A short pause ensued. The drug store cuckoo clock struck 2. Virginia excitedly imagined what Byron Curtis must be saying at the other end of the phone in his office, high up in one of the down town buildings.
Miss Clevebrook interrupted her thoughts. "Yes," she said, and Virginia fancied perhaps that her voice took on a more tender tone. "Same place," she continued, with a little laugh. "Did you? I'm so glad. Thanks so much for the flowers. You really mustn't send them so often. It's too extravagant of you."
Virginia gave a little start. "Theater again this week?" questioned Miss Clevebrook doubtfully. "I really think twice a week is too often."
But the man with whom she was talking seemed to overcome her scruples, and after agreeing to go with him on Friday evening of that week she said:
"Why don't you ask me why I called you up?" Then, seeming to forget that she was in a public place, she laughed merrily at the response that came back over the phone. Finally she said:
"No, it wasn't that. I want very much to see that book of 'After Dinner Speeches' you spoke of. Can you bring it to me this evening? No? Well, tomorrow, then. What are you going to do tonight?"
The fair questioner seemed but little pleased at the answer she received. She tapped her foot impatiently, and it was a full minute before she spoke.
Virginia fancied she heard Byron say, "I am going to call on Miss Allen tonight." For had he not asked if he might come over to see her Tuesday?
Miss Clevebrook recovered her temper, if indeed she had lost it, and said, "I thought I told you to drop that."
Virginia arose hurriedly and walked to the front of the store. "It is insupportable," she muttered to herself. "She soaks as if she owned him when"—

Her thoughts overcame her as the memory of all that had happened between her and Byron Curtis rushed to her mind.

The sharp ring of the little bell recalled her to herself and she looked up to see Miss Clevebrook leave the store and go slowly down the street with a happy smile dimpling her pretty face.

Virginia took an impulsive step toward the telephone, heedless of the clerk who stood behind the counter and who began to gaze at her rather curiously.

"He need not come to see me," she thought fiercely. "He would rather be with her." Her voice nearly choked her as she answered, "Express 2,804," to the inevitable, "Number, please?"

The moments which followed were agony to her. Her thoughts ran wild. "It was only last week he told me that he cared for me, and I—I was to have answered him tonight. Why—why did I care so much?"

"Hello!" sounded a man's voice over the phone, and then, before she could speak, "Is this you again, Louise?"

Virginia's face paled; then she flushed painfully. Had she been mistaken? It had never occurred to her that another man could have answered to Express 2,804.

She made an effort to control her voice. "I am Miss Allen. I wish to speak to Mr. Curtis."

"Mr. Curtis left the office, madam, at 2 o'clock. I am his partner, Mr. Colway. Can I do anything for you?"

"Thank you, no," replied Virginia.
"Mr. Colway wondered as he hung up the receiver at the glad change in the girl's voice.

"Miss Allen!" he soliloquized. "By Jove! I didn't know it had gone so far. Her voice sounded as if she might be pretty. If I am to believe Curtis on the subject of the young lady's charms, he is in great good luck, but I'll bet she can't touch Lou."

The glad change in Virginia's voice was noticed also by another man—a man who stood by the cigar counter watching the girl with his whole soul in his eyes.

Virginia turned from the phone with a happy feeling of thankfulness that was almost a pain. The man who had been watching her stepped quickly toward her.

"Byron!" she said, with a little glad cry, holding out both her hands to him.
"Virginia," he answered, "it is Tuesday."

"Yes," she said softly, "it is Tuesday." "And"—questioned he.
"Yes, again," she murmured even lower.

A drug store is not a very romantic place, but I think that those two told each other everything in the look they gave each other, quite unmindful of the little clerk who dipantly mixed an egg phosphate for the next customer.—Exchange
