Sturgeon's show windows present a very pretty appearance nowadays. They are filled with all kinds of pretty and useful articles suitable for Christmas presents, and that persons must be indeed hard to suit who cannot find something there to satisfy him. Amongst other pretty things is a mammoth doll as large as a three year old child, and a funny little negro boy with a goonine darkey smile and a pair of laughing eyes which roll in a very comical fashion. It is well worth going to see.

An awkward accident happened to the Steamer Harrison, on Monday. Capt. Ahuse who is in command, had concluded to bring her up the slough to this city so as to get her out of the force of the storm, and in pursuance of his purpose had come up the slough as far as "Ox-bow-bend." The tide was at its highest. The Captain thinking he had clear sailing ahead, was surging along at full speed, and failing to turn at the proper time he ran his ship right up onto the tide land, where she rested high and dry at low tide. The steamer Elmore, and afterward the tug Maggie, which was telegraphed for, for the purpose, made ineffectual efforts to pull her off. Tuesday morning, J. E. Tuttle and a crew of men took charge of the work of floating the steamer, and proceeded with pick and shovel to dig a ditch to facilitate the work. They dug all day Wednesday, and hope to succeed in getting the ship off this (Wednesday) evening.
