January, 28th, 1898.

Editor HEADLIGHT,

I see by the HEADLIGHT of recent dates that you have been discussing or cursing the transportation facilities of Tillamook and have showed them up in their true light which is not a very creditable one. There is no doubt but Tillamook needs better and cheaper transportation. The shippers of farm produce are hampered and delayed and charged too much freight. $3 or $3.50 may seem a big price per ton for freight from Portland to Tillamook, but to a "Tuckerite" double that amount would seem cheap. It begins to look like our county papers are run on the narrow track plan. There are other parts of Tillamook County that need to be looked after, other than the city of Tillamook, as far as transportation facilities are concerned. I think that Nehalem is in worse predicament, as far as shipping is concerned than Tillamook is, and so far as this part of the Co. is concerned we are simply driven from shipping by steamer, because we were charged so much that we had to quit shipping. I paid the stmr. Louis Olsen once $8.00 per ton freight in, and at the rate of $16. per ton on my buiter out, and the last shipping that I did I paid the Harrison $8.00 per ton freight in and $15.00 per ton out.

Until this last summer we paid more money for toll per ton than the people of Tillamook paid to have their freight laid down at their door. Until this last summer it cost the people here about $4.00 per ton, in toll, say nothing about other expenses and labor of the trip of two and four days. I think about 1000 lbs is the average load. I have paid $2.00 to go to the valley and back when the rivers were so high that the water ran over the top of the forward wheels of my wagon. We are not permitted to go out summer or winter without paying toll. This community has paid enough money for toll to have traveled the entire length of this toll road, yet it is nearly impassable at freighting time.

Yours Truly,
A. W. Fletcher.

Editor Tillamook HEADLIGHT,

Kind Friends:

Permit me to say, through your much appreciated paper, that since leaving your thriving little city last spring, some kind unknown friends have been sending us two copies of your paper. I have been only too willing to pay the two cents postage each week, thinking that at least one of my friends would tire of sending the paper; but during my absence from our Salem home, nearly every letter from my wife brings with it some clippings or reference to Tillamook matters collected from your paper.

Now I trust you will permit me to simply touch upon a subject that lies very near my heart. In a recent issue of a New York paper I noticed that the National Reform Party, and their allied organizations, intend to present to the Congress, now in session, one and a half million petitions for the passage of a resolution to amend the National constitution so that it shall recognize God and the Christian religion.

Now everybody in Tillamook knows that I believe that God is, and that His existence and authority ought to be fully recognized by every being in the universe. But we cannot approve of this proposal to make a formal recognition of God in the constitution of any civil government, and believe the whole idea is wrong, and that the results must be unsatisfactory if not disastrous. Now right here I wish to submit some very simple, and we think undeniable, facts for the consideration of your readers—your friends and mine.

1. The recognition of God is an act of faith. Heb. 11:6

2. A statement or acknowledgment of that recognition is a declaration of faith; and in the language of A. G. Daniels will say: "To incorporate in the constitution of any civil government a declaration of faith, which is a recognition of God, is to insert a religious clause."

Now if we insert a religious clause in the constitution, will it not place our government on a religious basis? And will not this religious basis confer power to enact and enforce religious laws? And does not this mean compulsion in matters of religion, and the invasion of the rights of men? And if this is done, will not good government be subverted? And is it not the primary object of good government to protect these rights?

John Stuart Mills says, "Mankind could be no more justified in silencing the honest opinions of any person than one person would, had he the power, be justified in silencing the opinions of mankind."

Much more might be said, but for fear this letter finds its way to the waste basket, I close right here, by assuring you that your paper will always find a welcome in our home, and thanking our kind friends for past courtesies in sending it, and trusting it may always be found on the side of Civil and religious liberty.

I am
Very Respectfully,
B. C. Tabor.

Overland for February

The Golden Jubilee number of the Overland is of much historic value. The interest attached to the first great western gold field is treated side by side with the new excitement in Alaska. "The Gentleman with the Grindstone," by W. W. Moreland, is one of the first clever Alaskan stories that have been published in any magazine. A practical article on outfitting for Alaska is written by L. W. Buckley, one of the promoters of the Mining Fair. In a recent short story contest opened by the Overland, for those connected with public educational institutions, the second prize was awarded Miss Laura Bridgman, for her very original story, "A Seventh Daughter." "Esoteric Realism," by Pantia Ralli, is a strong imaginative piece of fiction in which a writer of the French school sees in delirium the deformities of his own art and wakes to the true reality of idealism. An article on the Holy Grail by Euceline G. Crommelin will be of unusual value to students of legendary history and art; reproductions of Abbey's famous paintings in the Boston Public Library reveal the artist's conception of the holy legend. James Howard Bridge in "A Fresh View of Manifest Destiny" shows in retrospect and prospect the power and possibility of the Anglo-American race; a strong stand is taken in regard to colonization and trade, the author prophesying that the most powerful struggle yet to take place between America and Europe is that deciding supremacy in commerce. A sketch of the life of the famous young mute sculptor, Douglas Tilden, by William D. Armes, is a feature of the number. Several reproductions of strong groupings not published before introduced the public to the work the artist has just completed. Mr. Charles E. Naylor proves that we can and should build steamships in America. A new department, "The Whispering Gallery," will be conducted by Ressler Johnson, and offers a most attractive literary menu. There is another collection of pictures in the photographic contest. The Jubilee features of the number are the accounts of the Discovery of Gold, drawn from the historic sources of Bancroft, Hittell,

De Groot, and articles in the Overland, full of personal anecdote; and "California's Golden Jubilee," by Charles S. Greene, setting forth the colossal plans for the celebration of the discovery at Sutter's mill. There is poetry by Jean Kenyon Mackenzie, Elizabeth Vore and H. F. Thurston.
