Hurrah for Oregon!

Sometimes fusion doesn't fuse.

So far as Oregon is concerned, the nation is safe for two more years.

"Divided We Stand—United We Fall," it is said will constitute the fusion motto in Tillamook county, hereafter.

The "Yankee pigs" are still rooting away in Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines. They are digging graves for the former proprietors.

Tillamook county has reason to feel proud of its newly elected officers. They are all excellent and well qualified men and the affairs of the county will be safe in their hands.

Tillamook county evidently believes in letting well enough alone. The vote on Monday was an emphatic protest against further monkeying with the protective and financial systems of the country.

The gallant conduct of Lieut. Hobson and his men in taking the Merrimac into the mouth of Santiago harbor and sinking her there, will pass into history as one of the most daring deeds ever witnessed in naval warfare.

Old Tillamook county once more takes her stand solidly with the party of protection, sound money and progress. No more factions in the party. United it stands and bids defiance to the combined hosts of its enemies.

We publish in another part of this issue an article from the American Book Company relating to charge frequently made against the company and its books. Every man owes it to himself and his children; if he has any, to investigate the school book question and we trust that the article may receive a careful reading.

What's the matter with Oregon! She's all right. She has exploded the heresies of the pops, demonstrated her abhorrence of the doctrines of the dems, and sunk the silverites where the chances are 16 to 1 that they will never be heard from again. The three-headed animal which bellowed so lustily for free silver and office is in the throes of dissolution with none to comfort or offer it decent burial. Peace to its ashes. Never again may its bellowing be heard, to disturb the placid serenity of our great commonwealth in its onward progress.

The HEADLIGHT can look back over the campaign and feel that it has nothing to regret. It made a clean fight for the entire republican ticket. The editor did what he could with tongue and pen for its election. And what he did he did from principle and without hope of reward. He didn't ask a single cent from any candidate and only his bare travelling expenses while out in the field. Some of the candidates for whom we worked have always been the friends of the HEADLIGHT and a few have been its enemies. But they were republicans, and as such we stood by them. It may be that in the future when the republicans of this county want a republican newspaper—one that can be depended on to fight for the party and its nominees from start to finish without being either subsidized, kicked or cajoled, they will remember that they can find such a paper in the HEADLIGHT.

A Voice from Oregon

Oregon sends her greeting to the East! All hail, sister States! From this great commonwealth comes the first voice of the great campaign of 1898. And it comes in no uncertain tone. The Republicans of Oregon did not face only a single foe but a combination of all the foes of sound money, protection and progress. Into this combination rushed all the populists, all the free silver democrats, all the disgruntled republicans, together with all the malcontents of all political faiths and complexions, and all fused together into one common mass. It was a formidable political foe that confronted the republican hosts, last Monday morning, at the polls, and it was a question of vast moment that was to be decided. The honor of the nation was at stake; its credit was in the balance. The question to be decided was whether this nation was to continue to have a stable financial system, whether it was to remain in line with all other great nations of the earth, or take its place amongst such nations as Mexico and China, a silver, fiat money nation. And to the credit of the people of this great state be it said they stood by the administration and sound money. The republican party stood solid, almost to a man, and re-inforced by many an old line sound money democratic vote it hurled back the hosts of fiatism, free silver and confusion. It was a grand victory the results of which cannot be fully appreciated. It means sound money congressmen, sound money senators, and a cordial endorsement of the administration. But it is so means more. The voice for sound money and American honor will thunder across the mountains, even to the shores of the Atlantic; it will give encouragement to the republicans of the eastern states, and they will follow in the footsteps of the grand old "Web foot State" on the Pacific. And next fall the flat hosts will receive such a crushing defeat that their heresies will never again be taken up as a campaign issue. The news from Oregon will strengthen the hands of the administration and its friends and confirm the respect in which the state has always been held at the National Capitol. Hurrah for Oregon!

Mr. Gladstone as a Bond of Sympathy. The real growth of a good understanding between England and the United States is best evidenced by such spontaneous expressions as the death of Mr. Gladstone, on May 19, called out from the whole American nation. For a long time Mr. Gladstone's name had in the United States been synonymous with the loftiest personal character and the highest moral purpose in statesmanship. He had never visited our country and not many Americans had ever come under the glamor and spell of his noble oratory. Nor had the people of the United States ever to any appreciable extent read or studied his published writings. Further than that, the specific achievements of his long public career have never been matters of common information in the United States. Bismarck has been universally known throughout America for his splendid achievements. Gladstone, on the other hand, has been venerated and loved because he has always seemed to our serious-minded nation to represent righteousness and Christian principle applied as the true test of every public question that presented itself. Bismarck was always for Germany, and with him the end justified the means. Mr. Gladstone was loyal to his own country, but his sympathies were world-wide; and he was more concerned that his country's policies should be right than that they should gain unlimited mastery. He was the supreme statesman of the modern era of democracy. He was the greatest parliamentary leader and debater that any country has ever produced. He was the foremost personality of our time. His intellectual and moral attainments, together with his influence over his fellow-citizens, gave us the best possible evidence of the great qualities of the British race. For it must be a noble people that can appreciate and can faithfully follow a noble leader. From "The Progress of the World," in American Monthly Review of Reviews for June.
