EDITORIAL NOTES & NEWS.

REPORTS about the sickness of soldiers in Manila are exceedingly conflicting, and it is difficult to understand what are the real state of affairs. True, no two persons write alike. Some of the letters paint distressing pictures. We will quote from letters before us, and allow our readers to form their own conclusions: "An officer has written a letter to Mrs. Jones regarding the need of nurses, etc. Urge this matter all you can. The lack of nurses and hospital supplies is the greatest need of the war. Think of a man sick with typhoid fever, with no nurse! Think of 50 fever patients in one room, with one man to look after them—that man a soldier, knowing nothing about the care of the sick. Take this room at night, without light, except what is afforded by the single candle, carried by the attendant. Think of the misery of it all. Then add to this a lack of mosquito nets to keep off flies by day and mosquitoes by night. Nothing but the commonest food—none of the prepared foods ordinarily given the sick—and even a lack of medicine! Crowded into an attack of measles, and went to the hospital. Of course he had his own nurse and a room to himself, but he told me he would lay in the open air and die before he would face again the horrors of a night in such a place; that is, the suffering of the men. He said to hear some poor fellow calling for something—and you know how many things are wanted by the sick—calling and calling until exhausted, no man could listen without being sick himself. We buried one of our company a week ago, and there are now 17 forlorn, unmarked graves, besides those in the Catholic cemeteries. Nearly all the 17 deaths were the result of no care. We need nothing from the people at home; that is, from the women. We have food and clothing, and are comfortable enough until we are sick. Then, God help us! This is the dark side. Captain H. L. Wells, of the Oregon Volunteers, views the situation from another standpoint when he says: "There is no doubt that the men themselves are largely responsible for their own sickness. It seems to be impossible to get them to observe the plain and simple hygienic rules that have been laid down and explained to them. They eat and drink things they should not, lie on the ground evenings, and even all night, drink unwholesome water, neglect to wear their bands, do not take baths as often as health requires, which is daily in this climate, and act generally as though there was as little danger of fever as of a lightning stroke. Yet some of our apparently strongest and most vigorous men have been stricken down with fever, and one of that kind died after only a few days' illness. They seem to be as careless and irresponsible as children." No doubt there is a good deal of truth in the logic of Captain Wells' remarks, but it seems that the old, old story of scant provision made for the sick and wounded. The United States went to war for humanity sake, yet it is proven without a word of doubt that hundreds of sick, wounded and dying American soldiers were placed in a worse condition than the Cubans owing to the lack of forethought in making the necessary preparations to combat sickness and disease. Such, however, is war and the horrors attending it.

Another bill that may be of interest to school districts of Tillamook county passed the state legislature. It pertains to borrowing money, and reads: "The school directors of any school district in the state of Oregon may, when authorized by a majority vote of the legal voters present at any legally called school meeting, in the name and on the behalf of their district, contract a debt by borrowing money or otherwise not to exceed $500 for the purpose of building a school building, or repair of school buildings or the purchase of land for school purposes, and issue negotiable interest-bearing warrants and fix the time of payment of the same, of their district, evidencing such debt, and they may from time to time, not oftener than once a year, levy a tax on the taxable property of the district to pay the interest thereon, or principal when due, which taxes shall be collected in the same manner as other school taxes are or may be collectible by law."

Timidity seems to characterize the American people in asserting their claims as a literary people, and it is a common assertion that America has no literature. The American people in most matters are lacking in self-esteem, but where self-esteem apparently is great, literary humility is humble indeed. The fact of the case are, however, that America has just reasons to be proud of American literature, and the counsel given by the Vicar of Wakefield to his daughters, "Hold up your heads, girls," would be well-trimmed and apropos. American literature has a right to hold up its head and be proud of its achievements. It is to be hoped that our writers will bear in mind that there can not be a literature without a country, and the nearer they keep to the country wherewith and wherewith their literature deals, the nearer they will get to producing a national literature of which Americans may boast.

It is given below the bill passed at the special session of the legislature for the protection of grouse and prairie chicken. It is of interest to Tillamook county, and reads as follows: "That it shall be unlawful to take, kill, injure or destroy or have in possession any grouse at any time during the months of December, January, February, March, April, May, June or July of any year, or to take, kill, injure or destroy or have in possession any prairie chicken at any time between the 15th day of November and the 15th day of August next following; provided, that it shall be unlawful to take, kill, injure or destroy any prairie chicken at any time when the ground is covered with snow sufficient for tracking, and any person violating any of the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not less than $10 nor more than $50 or by imprisonment in the county jail of the county wherein such offense may have been committed not less than five days nor more than 25 days."

It is a source of gratification that the special session of the legislature got through so much work. The main objects of the session were accomplished—the election of a United States senator, the passage of the general appropriation bill, and the abolition of expensive commissions and boards. The board of railroad commissioners, the equalization board and the dairy and food commission, were dropped, and all of the laws carrying the emergency clause. That clause was omitted at first in the case of the two boards, but the omission was speedily rectified. In the senate, 76 bills were introduced and 32 passed. One was lost on a square vote, but it was subsequently amended and passed. The others were variously disposed of, or simply neglected. Eighty-three bills were introduced in the house, 45 of which passed that body, and 10 were squarely lost. Twenty-four senate bills passed the senate, though, owing to the fact that some were amended in the second house the numbers of bills sent to the governor does not equal these. The governor has not yet vetoed any bill passed at this session.

It is probable that congress will be called upon very early in the coming session to consider the question of revenue revision. It is pointed out that the redundant revenues which are piling up in the treasury make the consideration of the revenue problem a pressing duty. The treasury now has a balance of about $310,000,000, and would have still more but for the anticipations of interest not yet due and the voluntary redemption of unmatured bonds. The secretary of the treasury has been compelled to adopt the policy of relieving the money market by transferring more than a quarter of the cash balance into the banks, but this is a policy that cannot be indefinitely continued. It is expected that there will be strong disposition to increase expenditures, especially for military and naval purposes, but even these expenditures will probably leave a surplus to be gotten rid of by revenue reforms. Undoubtedly it will be proposed in congress to lop off some of the provisions of the new revenue law, and it will have a strong public support. There are features of the law which unquestionably can be dispensed with advantageously to the business public, and this should be done. The law is distinctively a war measure, and while it may be expedient to retain in effect portions of it, those interests upon which it bears hardest should be given relief as soon as possible. The matter is one of careful deliberation, but it is plain that revenue revision has become imperative.

GOVERNOR-ELECT GEER has the sympathy of every citizen of Oregon in his bereavement. The death of his wife at this time is doubly distressing to him, for it is only natural to suppose that he would be desirous of his wife participating in some of the honors conferred upon him.

A FEW more sessions of the state legislature like the one just ended, where practical legislation was the order of the day, Oregon should have some good laws.

SHUT IN—SHUT OUT!

TO THE EDITOR TILLAMOOK HEADLIGHT. Sir,—Allow me space to thank you for the stand you have taken in regard to our facilities of communication with the outside world.

This problem has been a serious one from the beginning. To some early pioneers, Mr. J. J. McCoy, I think, and Mr. James Quick, with others, is due the inception of the first relief by the establishment of the Trask road. The builders had the aid of the State of Oregon, a necessary help.

Mr. W. S. Runyon built the Wilson River road at a cost which exceeded his means, and left him poor in his last days. Year by year these two roads have been improved, and soon the proceeds of the tolls, it is hoped, will render either route available for all the year transit.

But the mountains are rugged and the expenses are something frightful. Mr. Grayson, I believe, to be generous and enterprising upon his part, while the creditors of the Wilson River route express themselves willing to "do all that is possible to secure the improvement of that road." Rudyard Kipling says: "It is not wealth nor rank nor state, But git up and git that makes men great." This is what is needed right here. The Trask River route has of late years been cursed with stage lines conducted by cruel or poverty stricken, stingy mail contractors. The horrors of the Klondike have been duplicated. It seems to me that the fault of this will in the future lie with ourselves and with the obtuseness of the government mail officials. The latter, of course, cannot be made to change. Such a pachydermatous concern as a government bureau cannot be sensitive to even the never tiring lash of a North Yamhill stage driver. Nothing but forked lightning would have any effect there.

"Well, what shall we do?" "Cheer the rag," and be imposed upon and have Tillamook known as a hole that no one without wings can get into or get out of? That is what we are doing. I believe that the creditors of the Wilson River road will consent to having a bridge built at Bester's. Mr. Sibley has promised to help on behalf of the Truckee Lumber Co. Others will likely assist.

If that bridge can be built, Bacon & McNamer will continue to maintain upon the road plenty of well cared for, stout horses. Emmet Quick will try to get them over the road, and his passengers will still declare that a ride over the mountains is an experience to be remembered with pleasure. Mr. Grayson will see where his interest lies and will insist upon a different service, and get a good line established over his road.

Until these things happen, Tillamook and the stage stock will suffer. CLAUDE THAYER.

DEATH OF MRS. GEER

Wife of the Governor-Elect a Victim of Heart Trouble. OMAHA, Oct. 13.—Mrs. Sarah J. Geer, wife of T. T. Geer, governor-elect of Oregon, died suddenly at an early hour this morning at her apartments in the Baker hotel, from heart failure, succeeding an attack of asthma. Mr. Geer started for Salem this afternoon with the remains.

Mrs. Geer arrived in the city with her husband Tuesday evening, accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Wright, and Mr. Wright of Union. Mrs. Geer was greatly fatigued by the journey and remained at the hotel to rest. Wednesday she felt better, but did not get out.

Last night the weather was very disagreeable, and probably affected her. She was attacked by her old trouble, and a physician was summoned, who stayed the alarming symptoms by administering morphine hypodermically.

Towards midnight Mrs. Geer rested easier, and later fell into an easy slumber. Mr. Geer gave his wife some medicine about 1 o'clock and soon he himself dozed off. Mrs. Geer evidently passed away while peacefully sleeping, as no sound was heard from her.

At the breaking of dawn Mr. Geer awoke, and was horrified to find, when he touched his wife's hand, that it was cold and stiff. Help was quickly summoned, but it was found Mrs. Geer was long passed assistance. It is supposed she expired about 2:30 o'clock. Many messages of condolence were received from Oregon by the bereaved husband, among them being from Governor Lord and Mr. Geer's chief political opponent, Will R. King.

Governor-Elect Geer returned with the remains to Oregon, and the funeral took place on Sunday.
