

COULSONBURG.

Mrs. Barker, who has been quite ill, is some better at this writing. Mr. E. T. Coulson and family made a trip to Tillamook last week. Several of the Coulsonburgers attended quarterly meeting at Beaver Sunday. Mrs. D. F. Coulson passed through the burg Monday. Mr. Quirk and family called on N. Coulson Monday. Miss Abbie Coulson, who has been home on a week's visit, has returned to her work. Mr. J. R. Dillow was in our burg Monday. Mr. Kinnaman and Mr. Jackson passed through our burg with two loads of apples on Thursday of last week.

NEHALEM.

The tug Maggie towed the Dewey to sea on Monday. The Elmore came in on Saturday for a load of salmon from Kinney's cannery. C. H. Wheeler, who was thrown from a horse a week ago, and went out on the Dewey, upon arrival in Portland was found to have three ribs fractured. His wife, upon receipt of the news, went out overland to join him. There was a dance at Macklin's hall on Saturday night, and a large attendance. Foley having no less than 17 representatives there. R. Krebs has taken hold of his mill again. Mr. Jones did not come up to his agreement. R. D. Sales, the Hobsonville mail carrier, took his rig off last week, he says this end of the road is too bad to haul over. County Commissioner Wheeler has a petition out for a road from Clay Daniel's place, in Foley, to the vicinity of Himple and Wheeler's saw mill. White Clover Grange held an indignation meeting on Thursday over the action of Commissioner Wheeler and appointed a committee to draw up a remonstrance against the County Court granting his petition for a road to his mill, and the misappropriation of the road fund for that purpose while the through road is left unworked, and unsafe and unfit for travel.

BARNEGAT.

Bert and J. Biggs went to the city on Wednesday. John R. Hater and Bob Sargent went to Hobsonville on Sunday business. Miss Esther Lattie visited Mrs. Carrie Hauhurst and other friends at Barnegat last week. Miss Florence Biggs returned to Tillamook last Wednesday after visiting with her cousin, Miss Clara Biggs. John Albert Biggs, jr., shot and killed 16 ducks the first time he ever shot a gun. This is doing splendid for a boy of only nine summers. Bert Biggs has quit seining and is home again. George Hunt has returned home after being absent visiting friends in Washington and other places. We're glad to see him home again. Mark Miner paid the lighthouse a visit last week. Lots of hunters have been on the Sand spit this week, but we wish they would shoot geese instead of cattle. C. Reynolds visited here on Saturday. Miss Clara Biggs and brother visited friends on Tillamook river last week. Fishing is not very good this week. D. R. Harbert went to Tillamook last Saturday and returned Sunday. "No, I do not think she will marry again. She vowed on the day he was buried she would not." "Ah! Thinking about it already, was she?" Laura—Papa, they are going to introduce military figures in the German this winter. Mr. Figg—I presume that means an increase in your appropriation bills? Tommie: "Hullo, Jimmie, what kept you?" Jimmie—Me and the of man had an argment. He wanted me to haul some wood into the back yard. Tommie—How did it end? Jimmie—In a draw—I drew it.

Discovery of America.

[WRITTEN FOR THE HEADLIGHT BY A SCHOOL BOY.]

Columbus was a humble man, Of very lowly birth; But he proposed the idea To sail around the earth. But unsuccessful he had been, To those whom he applied, At last unto a foreign land His secret did confide. For in those ancient days they thought The earth was surely square, And after they had gone so far, They dropped! they knew not where He told them "shure" that India Was just across the sea, And that the world was round As any ball could be. So he tried the Courts of Portugal, And then went back to Spain, But all his plans seemed failures As he homeward turned again. But the queen perceiving her mistake, Called him back once more, And said, I'll give you outfits for This new route to explore. I'll pledge my jewels all, she said, To send him o'er the sea, For who may know the fortunes He may bring back to me. So she fitted him three vessels, And started him o'er the sea, And Columbus was as happy As any man could be. He started out from Nolas, Upon a sea unknown, And soon his fleet was sailing Where no other man had been. He sailed off west far west, Across the ocean blue, To find the unknown route, As he told them he would do. When far away from home, His men on him went back, And at many times they talked Of throwing him off the deck. But they met encouragements, All along the way; Until at last there came A glad and happy day. The land it lay before them, All shinning in the sun, At last the dreadful voyage, Was almost done. And then he set the Standard, Of the King and Queen of Spain, And now the land is ours 'Tis "home" a sweet refrain.

TEETH OF SOLDIERS.

The Kaiser is Going to Have Those of His Troopers Put in Good Order. Toothache has been lately a great source of annoyance to the kaiser. Not that the imperial molars are, so far as I know, threatened with premature decay. Were this the case, nobody would risk the penalties of lese majesty by openly asserting it. The case is, however, from a public point of view, far more serious. It appears that the entire German army suffers from dental troubles to such an extent that it has been found difficult to find non-commissioned officers capable of giving the word of command. When they attempt to utter familiar formula the "Tention!" "Stand at ease!" "Shoulder arms!" and so forth, mere confused and inarticulate sounds issue from their toothless gums. Things are bad enough on the parade ground, but what would happen on a battlefield one hardly ventures to conjecture. Worse still, the boys in the training school for "non-coms." seem to be in no better plight than their elders. Nearly all of them, after inspection, seemed to have one or more hopeless tusks, while a large proportion can only be rendered fit for service by strict submission to the dentist's orders, and many are beyond the reach of art. His majesty has resolved to spend at once 11,000 marks on stopping the teeth of his Christian warriors or in providing them with false sets. This applies only to the Prussian contingent. Several of the subject states have not made up their minds to incur the expense.

GREAT MEN AND POLITICS.

All of the Foremost Statesmen of America Were Pronounced Partisans. Somebody says that Lincoln was a partisan. Of course he was a partisan. He was a republican from the party's foundation until his death, and he was a whig previously. Every statesman who accomplishes anything is necessarily a partisan. Popular opinion cannot be ascertained nor the popular will carried out except through the medium of parties, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Ever since the foundation of the government, save for a few years in the so-called "era of good feeling," during Monroe's presidency, there were two great parties in the country, and everybody who counted for anything in politics belonged to one or other of these parties. Every president has been a partisan. Washington was one, though many writers pretend he was not—that he held himself outside and above each of the parties of his day. Washington belonged to the party of Hamilton, Adams, Morris and the Pinckneys, the party which constructed the framework of American institutions, and which laid down the lines on which the government has been conducted by every party which has controlled it—federalist, democratic, national, republican, whig and republican. He was a federalist. Lincoln was an avowed, courageous and persistent partisan. But he was never a sectionist nor a demagogue.

What Cloves Are.

Cloves are the unopened flower buds of a small evergreen shrub resembling the bay or laurel, which is indigenous in tropical regions of America. The buds are gathered while still green and smoked by a wood fire, and are then dried in the sun. The four petals, stem and other parts of the flower may be distinctly seen by anyone who has the curiosity to soak a dried clove for a little while in hot water and to then examine it.

Dexterity of Cigarette Makers.

So great is the dexterity of the employees in cigarette manufacturing, acquired by long continued practice, that some workers make between 2,000 and 3,000 cigarettes daily—and being paid by piecework at so much per 1,000 earn about six dollars weekly.

Defaulters in China.

Through the medium of the Peking Gazette, the oldest paper in the world, the emperor of China recently issued an official order for the arrest of a defaulting magistrate of a town in the province of Kuangsi. The degree provided not only for the imprisonment of the culprit until he should have refunded all his stealings, but also ordered the confiscation of his property.

Retreat for Beavers.

The last safe retreat of the beaver in the United States is the canyon of the Rio Grande, between Eagle Pass and El Paso, a distance of about 300 miles.

TEETH OF SOLDIERS.

The opera begins in Dresden at seven o'clock and closes at ten, writes Lillian Bell from Berlin to the Ladies' Home Journal. The best seats are absurdly cheap, and whole families, whole schools, whole communities, I should say, go there together. Coming straight from Paris, from the theatrical, vivacious, enthusiastic French audiences, this first German audience seemed serious, thoughtful, appreciative, but unenthusiastic. They use more judgment about applause than the French. They never interrupt a scene, or even a musical phrase, with misplaced applause. Their appreciation is slow, but hearty, and always worthily disposed. The French are given to exaggerating an emotion and to applauding an eccentricity. Even their subtlety is overdone. The German drama is cleaner, the family tie is made much of, sentiment is encouraged instead of being ridiculed as it too often is in America, but the German point of view of Americans is quite as much distorted as the French. That statement is severe but true. It would be utterly impossible for the American jury to be more exquisitely misunderstood than by French and German men.

PECULIAR CHICAGO HABIT.

A Great Many Citizens Always Go to the Left in Entering or Leaving Buildings.

Chicago enjoys the exceptional distinction of being the only left-handed city in the union. That is, the good people of this bustling metropolis violate all the "rules of the road," so far as the matter of keeping to the right is concerned when entering or leaving public buildings. If a man, for instance, approaches a building where the entrance consists of two swinging doors, he will invariably reach out with his left hand, pull open the left-hand door and make a wild dash to get outside, running the risk of collision with anybody who remembers that to go to the right is the first law of navigation on land, says the Chicago Chronicle.

A CAMEL'S TWO AVERSIONS.

The Big Ungainly Animal Hates Black Clothes and Does Not Want to Be Touched.

Camels very frequently wear muzzles made of rope, and this leads to a misconception, says a writer in London Sketch. It is merely to prevent them snatching at the trees along the wayside, and not on account of viciousness, for they are the kindest and most humane of animals, and, I feel convinced, could not find it in their hearts to hurt a fly. They are, moreover, not half so conceited and overbearing as they look. Two great dislikes they have. One is to people wearing black clothes and the other to being jostled in the streets, or even touched.

LOCKED IN DEATH.

Courageous Buck Deer Shows Fierce Conflicts Often Result Fatally.

Although it is generally known how the buck deer fight and how sometimes in consequence their antlers become intricately entangled, there are few persons who have seen them when so interlocked, says the New York Times. At certain seasons of the year when the does are breeding their young the bucks are both very fierce and courageous in their protection of them and the approach of another buck is a signal for battle. In these conflicts it frequently happens that one or the other is killed and there are occasional instances in the course of these struggles of the antlers becoming interlocked between each other, which results in the death of both animals. One instance is on record where three pairs of horns were found thus entangled together, the skulls and skeletons lying as proof of the deadly outcome of the battle.
