EMMA.

At the recent freshet Slab Creek was higher than it has been for eight years.

Since the freshet we have had nice warm weather up to this date, the 28th.

Harry Chitwood arrived home from Crowley, Polk Co., on the 21st inst., accompanied by Mr. Rodney Bowman, of Ballston. They have been spending a few days on Salmon river hunting.

Hall Turdnage, of Red Prairie, Polk Co., has been spending a few days on his ranch on the little Nestucca, and went out via Emma, on the Slab Creek road.

Joe Altenburger is busy on his house, and Steve Bauer has been looking after his cattle that are out on the ranch.

The dance at Mr. Logan's on Salmon river, on the 25th, was well attended by both whites and Indians. A war dance was one of the interesting features of the evening. They used their guns and knives which made it appear most blood rending.

J. D. Chitwood was out looking for cattle and bagged two antelope on last Wednesday.

Nick Appolten started out side on horse back on the 27th.

We hope the reduction of the road districts will work a benefit to the roads. The road district in the south end of the county has been so large that the supervisor has not been able to visit our roads at the right time of the season to get all of the road tax worked out before many of the settlers go out to work. The supervisors ought to have deputies to see after the loose hands and have their work done before they go off and spend the snmmer months abroad. There was more than ten days work lost last year in this immediate locality, but still we hope the change will work for the best and that our roads will be improved with time.

WILSON RIVER.

J. Svenson brought a load of planks from Tillamook last Saturday to use in repairing the Wilson river bridge.

Quite a number of people gathered at the home of Erick Glad last Thursday evening and spent the evening in singing. They will meet at Mr. Freeman's next Thursday evening.

Lewis Smith, from Miama, came down to Peter Wilson's last week.

Erick Glad and Charley Svenson repaired the breakwater walls under the Wilson river bridge last Monday.

NESTOCTON.

Miss Lizzie Fleck, of Hebo, has been visiting her Grandmother, Mrs. Simmons, for a week.

Quite a nice time was reported at the last dance at Simmons'.

Mrs. Schlotter's father, J. J. Hall, who has been visiting with her this winter, made a trip over the Noth Yamhill road on horse back.

Mr. Tharp's folks moved into the Dan Pierce house lately.

Mr. William Schlotter, in company with Albert Harris, made a trip to Skookum Lake, Mr. Schlotter's homestead.

Our Grange No. 281 met the 27th, new officers were installed by the pastmaster. Proposals were made to build a Grange hall.

NEHALEM.

The Woodmen installed their new set of officers on Saturday night.

W. H. Hoskins and daughter Ethel were visitors at C. Pye's Saturday and Sunday. Miss Ethel returns to the Academy at Tillamook on Tuesday.

The Misses Esma and Gladys Newell are both teaching school; the former at Barnegat and the latter in the adjoining district.

A slight accident to the tug Maggie occurred on Thursday, a weak spot in her boiler caused by salt water corrosion gave out. She has been repaired.

Blackburn's cook left for his home on the Coquille River on Sunday, and that department is now in charge of the two Mrs. Blackburns.

E. K. Scovell was around on Sunday soliciting signatures to an Anti-Imperialism petition.

There is a very bitter feeling among the citizens of Nehalem City against the projectors of the incorporation scheme. They charge high-handed sharp practice in applying for a charter without the knowledge or consent of the citizens; also fraud in stealing the name of the original town, Nehalem.

Born—To the wife of Wm. Tohl, a daughter.

Married—Christ Christiensen, of San Francisco, to Miss Nelly, youngest daughter of Salomon Lovewell. Next!

Now is your time farmers of Nehalem to rustle for a creamery. Did you see the article in the last issue of the Headlight? A Washington county creamery man is seeking a suitable location.

Neighborhood Quarrel.

Frank Reynolds paid a fine of $5 on Tuesday for assault and battery on Jas. Kimball in a neighborhood quarrel on Sunday. In the same squabble William Kimball pleaded guilty to assaulting H. Kimball and paid a $5 fine. On Thursday Frank Reynolds stood trial charged with assault and battery upon William Kimball. The jury, after a long trial, brought in a verdict of not guilty.

Turkish Bath Fix in Home for $5.

J. W. Steinmetz is the agent for the Quaker hot-air and vapor bath cabinet. A consignment of these baths reached him this week, which he is selling at the low sum of $5 each. No home is complete without one. Prof. Kuhne resolves all disease into one, and says that dirt is the primal cause of all the ills to which flesh is heir to. It requires heat to open the pores of the skin, either dry heat or not air. It costs only about 3 cents per bath. Further particulars of J. W. Steinmetz, Tillamook, who is now prepared to furnish a limited number of these baths.

Masonic Notice.

BEAVER.

The protracted meeting, which has been in progress one week, held by Elder Le Masters of Tillamook has been well attended by attentive and eager listeners. He expects to close his series of meetings Thursday, when C. Mills is expected to fill his regular appointment at 11 a.m. this coming Sunday.

Rev. Dollarhide reports good congregation at Coulson's school house last Sunday with good results.

Rev. Armstrong reports a pleasant time at Sand Lake and being kindly entertained by the people.

C. Mills reports that he also had a fine audience at the Hebo school house and that after services he was kindly invited to several of their homes for refreshments.

Last Sunday night several from Blaine, a distance of 8 miles, also from Cedarville, a distance of 9 miles, were out to Beaver to hear the gospel preached by Elder Le Masters.

The Headlight is highly appreciated and read by most of the Beaverites.

The new church is nearing a completion. Those who have signed to help will do a great favor by paying up at once to C. Mills, the treasurer, also those who signed work. Now is your time.

This coming Sunday Rev. Armstrong goes to Woods, and Rev. Dollerhide to Hebo.

Wm. Christenson, of Oretown, the first white child born in the south end of this county, who was recently married, drove into Beaver last Sunday night after dark in route for his home from Tillamook. He found Beaver people all away from home attending church, hence he took the liberty to put his horses in C. Mills' barn and waited himself out in the cold until Mr. Mills came home and took him in.

EXPANSION AND LIBERTY.

A fine illustration of the folly of forming theories before collating fact is given in an address just delivered by John Morley, the well-known British statesman, in which he deplored the present tendency to expansion which is seen in the policy of England and the United States, says the Globe Democrat. Speaking for England he said that "the prevailing spirit of imperialism must inevitably bring militarism, a gigantic and daily growing expenditure, increased power to aristocrats and privileged classes, and war." Mr. Morley is one of the best informed on matters of history of all the statesmen now at the front in England. He is a typical scholar in politics. Moreover, he has been in public for about a quarter of a century, and has thus had an incentive to study public questions on their practical side. He is a radical, too, and must be supposed on that account to be familiar with the differences in the political conditions in England between the present time and the recent and the remote past. He has overlooked those differences in this exigency, however, for the history of his country in the past three-quarters of a century proves that there is no such relation between imperialism and prerogative as that which he tells.

What Mr. Morley calls imperialism has found its most conspicuous assertion as a settled policy in England within the past sixty or seventy years, and yet no country in the world has made such advances in liberalism as England has in that time. When England in 1783 lost all her American colonies except Canada the world for a time supposed that her power was ended, and that the fate of Athens, Rome, Venice and other states which has once been great, but which had vanished from the map of the world, would soon be hers. But in the wars with Bonaparte short'y afterwards she revealed a power and a persistency which she had not shown before, and immediately afterward she began a career of expansion which has no parallel in history. With this territorial expansion an expansion in the rights and privileges of her people have gone hand in hand. The franchise act of 1832 added 500,000 voters to the British electorate. The act of 1867 increased the list by about 1,100,000. The act of 1884 added more than 2,000,000 to the roll. Shortly before Mr. Morley was born, or before 1832, only 400,000 persons were permitted to vote for members of the House of Commons. The number which voted in the last general election was about 6,000,000. Previous to 1832 only one in fifty of the inhabitants in the United Kingdom were electors. One in six have the status to-day.

The period of England's greatest expansion, that is to say, is coincident with an extension of popular rights and a diffusion of liberty in that country such as the world never saw in any great nation before, for the basis of the franchise in the United States, notwithstanding the states at the outset, was broad from the beginning. England, during the period in which she has extended her rule over Asia, Africa and the islands of the sea, has progressed nearer to democracy than any other great nation of ancient or modern times except the United States. Lord Derby a little over 40 years ago advocated the raising of a "barrier against the current of that continually increasing and encroaching democratic influence in this nation which is bent on throwing the whole power and authority of the government nominally into the hands of the masses, but practially and really into those of demagogues and republicans." The "democratic influence" which the great Tory chieftain deplored has come in England, and Derby himself was obliged to help to extend it by the franchise bill which he and Disraeli were force to put through Parliament a few years after he made this outburst—the franchise act of 1867. The peril which England's Radical leader imagines he sees in imperialism does not exist. Nowhere in the world's history has the power of the "aristocrats and privileged classes" diminished in such a degree as it has in England in the period in which its expansion in territorial area and political prestige has been greatest.

Will the treaty of peace be ratified? The senate is to decide this momentous question on Monday. It should be ratified without any hesitancy whatever.

Two Men Drowned.

Astoria, Jan. 31.—Two men were drowned in Young's bay this morning, and another was saved only by good fortune. Abram Junna, a dairyman in charge of the Andrew Young ranch, is the man saved, and Harry Light and August Baer were the two who were drowned.

It has long been the custom of the three to bring milk from the ranch to Astoria every morning in an open boat, and this morning they started as usual, notwithstanding the fact that a gale was blowing. Each was an expert boatman, and as they had often crossed in bad weather, paid little attention to it. They left the ranch about 4 o'clock and had entered the main channel of the bay, when their boat was struck by a sudden squall and capsized. How long Baer and Light kept above the water will never be known, but as Junna rose to the surface he found himself against the upturned boat. He grabbed it and climbed on top. Chilled to the bone, he crouched on the drifting boat and there became unconcious.

About 7 o'clock, two hours after the accident, as Charles Eklund, the drawtender at the Young's bay railway bridge, was going to meet the morning train, he saw a boat coming down the bay, with a man clinging to it. Fortunately, the craft drifted close to the pier, and Eklund was able to secure its passenger. Active rubbing soon brought Junna back to consciousness, and he then told of the loss of his two companions.

August Baer, one of the men who was drowned, was a native of Coos bay, and son of John Baer, who was considered one of the wealtiest residents of that section. He had left home owing to some family differences. Henry Light was a Finn, and was known to be a hard working young man. Both were unmarried, and were about 25 years old. The bodies have been recovered.

Young's bill to prohibit the opening or laying out of county roads on any greater grade than 7 per cent is considered a most meritorious measure. Exceptions are made of roads in mountainous country, where easy grades are impossible, the only object of the bill being to obtain good grades where they are feasible. The bill also provides for the letting of county road or bridge work by contract, when ever the cost exceeds $50. The contract is to be in writing, and let to the lowest responsible bidder.

The postage rate on letters from here to Manila, via Hong Kong, is 5 cents. If one cannot afford this small outlay on correspondence for United States sailor or soldier at Manila, it can be forwarded for 2 cents on a transport or any other government vessel, if so designated on the envelope. But there is no telling when such letter will reach its destination, the surest and safest course is to "dig up" a nickle and transmit the letter by the regular mail route.

A Quaker once sent his watch to a jeweler to have it repaired, and sent with it the following note: "Mr.——— Dear Sir: I hereby send thee my pocket clock, which standeth in need of thy friendly correction. The last time it was in thy friendly school it was in no way benefitted or profitted thereby, for I perceive by the index of its mind that it is a liar and the truth is not in it. Purge it therefore, and correct it from the error of its way and when you findest it conformable to the above rules, send it home to me with a true and just bill, drawn out in the spirit of moderation, and I will remit to thee in the root of all evil.

J. H. Griffin, a well-known timber cruiser, returned to Portland from St. Helens, where he had been examining timber lands for Michigan capitalist, with a view to purchasing for sawmill plants to be started in the near future. He says there is considerable good timber in Columbia county still, but most of it is rather remote from the streams. When asked where the bulk of the available timber lies now, he said the Nehalem, Wilson and Trask creeks and their tributaries still contain large bodies of fir, cedar and spruce, and there is also a large amount of timber at the head of Lewis river and on the Washougal, in the state of Washington. On Gray's river and on Young's river, tributaries of the Lower Columbia, much first-class timber can still be found. Most of the timber lands of Oregon and Washington have passed out of the hand of the government, and are being held by private persons, who are awaiting a rise in values. Mr. Griffin thinks there will be a general inquiry for these lands on the part of the Eastern people in the near future.

THOUGHTS THAT TICKLE.

"Professor," said a graduate, trying to be pathetic at parting, "I am indebted to you for all I know."

"Pray do not mention such a trifle," was the reply.

"Our duty to humanity," said the Cornfed Philosopher, "demands that we should administer the affairs of the weak and oppressed, and our duty to ourselves demands that we should get darn good pay for the job.

"Conversation is only the art of talkback."

"Not much; conversatinn is the art of getting somebody to listen to you."

"There is nothing more uncertain than a horse race," exclaimed the man with a tendency to talk loud.

And the melancholy friend responded, "You never worked in a weather bureau, did you?"

Uncle Silas, just in from Upcreek, jumped out of the way of the car fender and shook his brawny fist at the gripman.

"If you jab that blamed hayrake agin my laigs," he exclaimed, "I'll lick ye!"

"Wot's that book you've got there, Weary."

"That's the 'Art of dining well.'"

"Say, that's a rum sort o' book fer a gen'leman in your position, Weary."

"Oh, I dunno. A feller can admire art without bein' a artist, Limpy."

"You see I don't mean to tell me you consider Ritem a genius?" asked the office loafer.

"That is just what I mean to tell you," said the proofreader, stoutly. "You ought to see his stuff as it comes in—sometimes with as many as three words misspelled in one poem."

Bigsbee is a terribly melodramatic fellow, isn't he? He said he'd drain his heart's blood for the woman he loved. Do you think he meant it?"

"Why, I guess so. Bigsbee is agent for a drain and sewer pipe concern."

When a young woman can describe to you the necktie that a young man wore the week before that young man was peril.

"And when I proposed to her she turned all colors of the rainbow at once."

"How can you make such a rediculous assertion?"

"All the colors at once, if you have not forgotten your high school lessons, you ought to know make white.

"My wife told me to buy a parrot. How much is this one worth?"

"Five dollars."

"Great Scott! That's simply robbery. Can he talk?"

"No, sir."

"I'll take him."

"It beats all," remarked the Human Ostrich, "how people stare at the India rubber man. Rubber, forsooth! The rubber is all in their eye!"

The Sutherland Sister had sold but one photograph tonight; but her spirits were as bouyant as ever.

"No, some of it must have been in their necks!" she replied, naively.

"Do you believe in expansion, Mr. Noodle?"

Noodle—No, quite the contrary. I believe in making two one.

The Heiress—The man I marry must be handsome, afraid of nothing and clever. Money's no object to me.

Mr. Broke—Doesn't it seem like fate that we should have met?

"Why should you worry? You've got a rich uncle who is on his last legs, and you are the nearest relative."

"O, yes, I know, but a grass widow has just moved into the flat across the hall."

Mystery—"Robert dear, how do you suppose those dozens and dozens of empty bottles ever got into the cellar?"

"Why, I dont know, my dear. I never bought an empty bottle in my life."

After an absence of half a year she had returned.

"Did you think of me often, George?" she asked.

"Only once, Aggie," he replied. "But it was an awful long think—six whole months!"

"I think I'll get my wife a cook book," said the young man.

"How long have you been married?" asked the experienced one.

"Six months,"

"To late. You ought to have bought it the first week. She will take it now as an indication that you no longer love her."
