"MOUNTAIN QUEEN."

Part First—A band of children watching their flocks feeding on the mountain side have selected one of their number and crown her as their Queen. An alarm is given that the flocks have gone astray. While they are absent seeking the lost flocks the Gypsy Queen enters and induces Rosalie to go with her.

Part Second—To the Gypsies bring of welcome their Queen enters, bringing Rosalie with her. She begs to be taken home but is refused. The Queen then sings a song for Rosalie to learn and intends sending her to the fair on the following day to sell baskets. After the Queen has retired Rosalie comes from her tent, and seeing no one near, resolves to escape.

Part Third—Rosalie has become so wearied by wandering that she falls asleep and is discovered by a band of fairies. While the fairies are endeavoring to persuade Rosalie to remain with them, they are warned of the approach of mortals and secrete themselves. The mortals enter bewailing the loss of Rosalie. Unseen the fairies enter the grove and are discovered by the mountain children, who question them as to their lost one. At a signal from the Fairy Queen Rosalie is revealed. After a song of thanks by the mountain children Rosalie is crowned by the Fairy Queen.

It stated in official circles of Bloemfontein, Orange Free State, that President Kruger will propose to the Transvaal road the abolition of the dynamite monopoly. While the Orange Free State is using its influence at Pretoria to obtain reforms for the uitlander in the Transvaal, the railroad company has sent all its available rolling stock to Johannesburg, to be in readiness for a possible excitement.

To the Hebo Poet.

No, I do not think there's no other but me.
The same you can plainly see
By re-reading the last line of verse number three.

As for the pretty falsehoods we'll not recall,
For we know full well the devil answers for all
That imp can be transfigured into any form of art,
But when he writes poetry, to fill up a part

Of the Headlight he's getting wonderful smart.
You have a friend, who's a friend to me,
Who says you're unmarried, or claims to be.

If you are so fortunate to have a wife,
You'd better prove true to her the rest of your life,
For I assure you that she thinks more of you
Than the sweet, sensible Nestucca belles do.

To the Nestucca Belle.

She is as mad as she can be,
And is trying to chase me up a tree;
And like her mother Eve in Eden
She thinks I should eat and be even.

She tempts me, oh, so smart,
Accusing me of breaking her heart.
Like Breckenridge, of Kentucky,
Fooling with a belle of Nestucca

May name of the public she'll expose.
That'll bring me to time, she knows,
But it is clear of disgrace people know,
Threats with witnesses she hath made

Are the imaginations of an old maid.
She will sue me for a big lot of money,
Owns she is rather rattled in brain
And don't even know my name.
If your name I knew I'll never tell,
For, perchance, you're no Nestucca belle.

WILSON RIVER.

Owing to the excessive rains the people are somewhat behind in their gardening.

The people of Wilson river are so busy of late they hardly know what is going on in the outside world.

Mr. Wicklund is adding greatly to the appearance of his premises by the erection of a commodious and substantial barn.

The Normal class, held in the school house every Tuesday evening is proving to be a source of great benefit to those who avail themselves of the opportunity of taking an active part.

The settlers up the river are inclined to believe they will be shut off from the free access to a public highway. Already private parties have obstructed the road by placing a fence beyond the thoroughfare, thus forcing the public to travel on an almost impassable road.

To allow the road to remain as it is, is an injustice to the taxpayers, who are compelled to travel back and forth over the above mentioned lane. The writer is aware of the fact the people who travel this road are among the highest taxpayers, for what property they possess in the county. We simply ask for fairness in the matter and know that we are greatly in need of a much improved road.

SAND LAKE.

Our school is progressing finely under the charge of Miss Barrow.

Thomas Shillinglaw has sold his chattels and rented his place and will leave for Iowa this week.

Mr. Gove has moved onto Mr. Shillinglaw's place.

Frank Farmer has been laid up with chills and fever for some time, but is out again.

Bert Hoyt has returned from the valley.

An effort is being made to locate a road from Sand Lake up Sand creek and Buley creek to Tillamook, which if found practical would shorten our road to Tillamook between five and six miles. Let the good work go on.

Ripe strawberries and cranberries are found on many of our tables now.

NEHALEM.

The tug Roberts came in on the 6th, and towed out the schooner Albion.

The tug Maggie with the Dewey in tow came in on the 7th. The Dewey is now loaded and ready for sea. She brought in supplies for Himple and Wheeler and other merchants.

The launch Irene towed down a large raft of logs from Blackburn's camp on Monday.

A very small schooner was observed to pass Nehalem, going north, on Tuesday, supposed to be Will Newcomb's boat, of Tillamook.

The exercise at the church on Children's day were well attended and passed off very pleasantly and creditably.

Charlie Seamon has a brother in on a visit.
C. W. Alley has taken his family out to Astoria.
