COURSE OF STUDY.

Circular Letter Issued by State Supt. J. H. Ackerman.

We do not claim that the course of study is all that could be desired, yet we trust that it has sufficient merit to entitle it to a fair trial, and what imperfections there may be, we will be glad to remedy in future editions.

Its chief objects and methods should receive the unanimous and hearty support of our teachers and school officers. The valuable results which it can gain for our schools, not the difficulties which it encounters in securing a recognition, should command our main attention. Nothing tends so effectively to destroy a cordial interest in any educational movement as the habit of searching for petty defects in it and emphasizing them constantly in our opinions and actions respecting it. Success in any difficult effort depends upon enlisting a sufficient interest in its salient points, so that the imperfections observed in it and the hindrances found in its progress do not distract nor dishearten its supporters. The graduation of the country schools embraces a great truth, not new in itself, but recent in its application to this kind of work. It is the establishment of a wise and orderly procedure to control the pursuit of the branches taught in these schools. It has the power to quicken a sincere and intelligent zeal in advocating and incorporating it as an organizing principle in this portion of our educational operations. The more complete and well balanced training which it provides for school children should arouse a general and well sustained desire to realize speedily its best effects in our ungraded schools.

We should firmly adhere to its plans and arrangements. They are founded, without doubt, in the correct and permanent ideas of graduation in the public schools, and have been approved by nearly all the prominent educators of this country.

We should exhibit no spirit of impatience and undue haste in securing the adoption of this grading scheme. We must expect slow progress in this work, as we have to contend with regulations in the school room, which have been in use for at least fifty years, and with the practices of school districts, in which the communities are the most conservative in the state.

The prevailing system of teaching in our ungraded schools tends invariably to produce an unbalanced education in the minds of the pupils, the most serious difficulty which we have to meet. It will take years to overcome this difficulty.

An adequate view of the magnitude of the work upon which we have entered as well as the surpassing good to result from it, must lead to the formation of the settled purpose to prosecute it to a successful end. The feeling of discouragement should have no place, at any time, in our minds. A cowardly spirit should not be allowed under any circumstances to paralyze our efforts, as the severe and prolonged struggle before us is considered. We should accept cheerfully the hard and increased labor which must devolve upon us. Every opportunity for the permanent establishment of this system in a county, or even in a school district should be gladly embraced.

We must not cease in our exertions to concentrate all the agencies at our command to secure the adoption of this system of graduation. We will need to create a sentiment in favor of the course among those most immediately in charge of the schools to be affected. We should strive to impress upon them the duty to introduce the proposed innovations at once and to persevere until they are incorporated into the schools. District boards should be made to understand clearly the nature of the scheme; its principal features should be discussed at teachers' meetings; lectures should be delivered upon its advantages before audiences composed of the parents and children in the various school districts; our teachers should, year after year, set out with force its distinctive methods.

The state department of public instruction will impress its present need of our schools upon the public mind by correspondence, by addresses, by issuing circulars, and by items in the annual reports.

To organize all these agencies for the prosecution of this work will be a most worthy task, and to hold them steadily to the objective point in view is to ensure the more speedy and complete success.

We must depend in the more immediate future very largely upon the efforts of the teachers of the country schools to secure the establishment of the graded system. They are in close contact with the schools boards, the parents and the pupils, and can easily influence these to accept its features, therefore we should direct our attention at the present time chiefly to persuading and instructing these teachers that may intelligently and energetically work to establish in the country schools this scheme of graduation.

We believe that the past record of the teaching fraternity of this state justifies us in the belief that there will be an unanimity in the work of uniting completely the educational operations of the state into a system, which begins at the primary school and ends in the university.

J. H. ACKERMAN,
Supt. Public Instruction.

Not Many in Tillamook.

"Job," writing to the New York Produce Review, want some information how best to handle the "ignorant" farmer. He asks:

I would be very grateful to some enterprising creamery manager to tell me through the columns of your journal the best way to handle the "ignorant" farmer. I mean that fellow who is everlastingly on the growl when he has no more reasons for complaint in connection with the creamery than has the most favored farmer in the institution.

I mean that fellow who is careless about caring for the milk; who lets it go sour about once a month in order to have something to growl about.

I mean that fellow with a swelled head who thinks the creamery manager could not live without him; and that wisdom will some day all be crowded into his own grave.

I mean the fellow who is always stirring up strife in the creamery and making it unpleasant for those about him, who are nearly but not quite so ignorant as himself.

I mean that fellow who will steal skim milk and go about the community parading his views on temperance and religion.

I mean that fellow who will put his arms around your neck and ask for favors and half an hour later vomit up a lie on the man who refused to favor him at detriment to his employer.

I mean that fellow who carries a stock certificate of a hundred dollars and shows it to his colleagues to verify his arguments.

I mean that fellow who will carry his sample of milk away eighteen or twenty miles to have it tested, and, being sure to take the creamery part of the milk, will make explanations by the score to his neighbor farmers and wonder how it all is.

I mean that fellow who poses as a model "business man" farmer, who says mean things about the creamery fellows who make him wait so long; while often times after being served and ready to go he will stand out in the rain and talk about "sound money" or "free silver" when he ought to be at home sawing wood for his wife to bake with.

I mean that fellow who is never satisfied with anything on the face of the earth.

Thinking that I might meet this fellow some day, and having been warned to look out for him, I desire to be prepared to meet him.

I am naturally of a sympathizing nature. I would be glad to use the milk from this fellow's dairy when he comes around, but first want some light on the matter.

I used to handle some of my patrons with kid gloves, but now my gloves are worn out and I can't afford new ones for this fellow. The "Hobson" bug is around our way, too, so please give me light on the other pest first, and whatever you say I'll do.
