NEW CLOTHING. NEW HATS. NEW SHOES.

VIRTUOUS SPASMS.

It seems to be an almost hopeless task to attempt to run this old world to suit the truly good people, who are serving a probationary term here before final transplanting.

The good people of Montreal, that is the truly good, discovered the other day that a goddess, or a nymph, at least some creature without clothes, had found her way into the Gallery park of that city.

Following closely upon the Montreal assault upon morality comes the discovery of Mrs. Helen Bullock of the W. C. T. U. that root beer contains alcohol and another temperance crusade is to be started.

POPPING THE QUESTION.

When a girl hints at matrimony to a young man what he says is apropos if it's a proposal.

He cautiously—What would you say, darling, if I ask you to be my wife? Darling—Ask me and find out.

Miss Cate—What made Miss Millions accept Cholly after first refusing him? Miss Pert—Oh, he looked so cheap when she turned him down that she couldn't let the chance for a bargain escape her.

AFTER MARRIAGE.

Marriage is worse than a lottery, for in a lottery you run chances of drawing a blank.

"That man cheated me out of a cool million." "Ah—wouldn't you marry his daughter, I suppose." "No; he let me marry her and doesn't give us a cent."

It is funny what small respect married people sometimes have for each other's judgement, when you remember that each is supposed to have picked out a perfect mate.

"The course of true love," sighed the Sentimental Person, never, alas runs smooth." It does sometimes," said the Savage Bachelor, "until after the wedding."

"Some women who claim that they wouldn't marry the best man on earth," says the Manymunk Philosopher, "find out after embarking in matrimony that they have unwittingly kept their word."

"Don't you know I could have cut old Rich out when he was courting Miss Belle Smalkash?" "Why didn't you do it?" "And have her telling me all the rest of my days about the good match she might have made? Oh, no, not me!"

CONDENSED SMILES.

"Henry, why do you smoke continually from morning until night?" "It's only time I get. I sleep from night till morning."

Husband—I am going to join another club to-night. Wife—I don't suppose I shall see you at all after this. Husband—Oh, yes! They have ladies' day.

"Mamma, what would you do if that big vase in the parlor should get broken?" said Tommy. "I should spank whoever did it," said Mrs. Banks, gazing severely at her little son. "Well, then, you'd better begin to get up your muscle," said Tommy, gleefully, "coz papa's broken it."

Mrs. Hen Peck—First we get horseless carriages and then wireless telegraphy. I wonder what next? Her Husband (meekly)—Wifeless matrimony, perhaps.

"Julius, I thought you weren't going to speak to the Smiths any more." "Well, Julia, I had to borrow their little boy to see me send off these rockets."

You villagers seem to be a rather deliberate lot of people? "I suppose we be. There was a feller drowned down in the creek a spell ago. He yelled 'Help, help!' afore he went down th' last time, an' th' editor of th' village paper heard him an' went back to th' office an' put in his paper two 'help wanted' ads an' charged em up to th' estate, by gum!"

THE STERN PARENT.

She—What did pa say? He—I asked his consent to our marriage by telephone, and he replied, "I don't know who you are, but it's all right."

"I don't think my religion will be any obstacle to our union," he urged, "I am a spiritualist." "I am afraid it will," she replied. "Papa is a teetotaler, you know."

Practical Father—If he says he loves you I suppose he does; but can he support you? Daughter—Why, papa, you know it wasn't his fault that the chair broke.

Mrs. Gotrex—Mabel, dear, are you sure Mr. Woodly loves you for yourself alone? Mabel—Yes, I'm sure he does, mamma. He is always so restless when you are in the room.

He—Dearest, say the little word that will make me happy for life. She—Have you spoken to papa? He—Oh, yes; he says the money is all your own, free from incumbrance.

Tom—I guess I'll resign my position with you, sir. His Employer—But why do you want to do that when you are about to be married? Tom—Because it's your daughter that I'm about to be married to.

Emily—Why are you waving your handkerchief? Angelina—Since papa has forbidden Tom the house, we have arranged a code of signals. Emily—What is it? Angelina—When he waves his handkerchief five times that means, 'Do you love me?' and when I wave frantically in reply, it means, 'Yes, darling.' Emily—And how do you ask other questions? Angelina—We don't. That's the whole code.

Edna—How's your lame arm, Jack? I was afraid you might not be able to get around to-night. Jack—Not to be able to get round? Haven't I another arm, dear?
