Connubialities.

On Monday a Kansas girl waved her handkerchief at a stranger and on Tuesday they were married. On Wednesday she waved a rolling pin at her husband and on Thursday he applied for a divorce. That's what the wild waves are saying.

After a married life of one month Mrs. Edith Quick of Peru, Ind., is accused of poisoning her husband so that she might wed his brother. There may be nothing in a name, but at the same time there is something swift in the Quick family.

Miss Mina Washington Thomas, daughter of Theodore Thomas, was married on the 4th inst. to Danford B. Sturgis of New York at the summer villa of Mr. Thomas, Fairhaven, Mass. The bride wore white crepe de chene, trimmed with duchess lace, and her ornaments were pearls.

Albert Perry and Miss Emma Moyer of Ferry, Okl., desiring to be married, were unable to cross a creek swollen by the rain, on the other side of which the minister lived, so they went to the edge of the bank, while the minister stood on the opposite bank and shouted the service at them.

The Chicago Chronicle tells a story of a widower of 75 who has been married five times and wanted to try it again, as he "was tired of living alone" since the death of his last helpmate. He was introduced to a blooming widow of 54 by a mutual friend, courted her about five minutes, then secured the services of a minister and had the knot tied at once.

American women with title-hunting proclivities may get some idea of the benefits derived from such a union from the case Mrs. Samuel J. Colgate, who became the Countess of Stafford. By the accidental death of noble spouse the countess became a widow within a few months after her marriage. The small extent to which she was esteemed by her late husband may properly be gathered from the fact that, out of an estate of nearly £30,000, the insignificant portion of £1,000 was bequeathed to the American widow, his lordship taking particular pains to provide that all heirlooms and ancestral property should descend to others.

Out of the Ordinary.

A Sullivan (Iud.) man has refused to pay a note for $150, which he gave to a church some years ago, on the grounds that the paper was drawn on a Sunday and was therefore of no value.

Dr. C. G. Hoadley, the Connecticut state librarian, has now in his possession an old placard or dodger which was distributed ten days after Washington's death, announcing a memorial service in Hartford.

Harry Hale of Bellefontaine endeavored to open the head of an old whisky barrel recently with a redhot poker. He thrust the poker into the bung and the barrel exploded into a thousand pieces. Hale may die.

Duke M. Farson, the Chicago broker, has bought for $10,000 historical Buffalo rock, three miles west of Ottawa, Ill., which has been the scene of the war dances by the Indians at an early day and which a few years ago was used as the state encampment grounds.

J. B. Frye, one of the oldest residents of Virginia, died recently and was buried according to his wish in a walnut coffin made with his own hands from an old walnut tree on his farm.

The reason why the Great Salt Lake in Utah is growing smaller, according to Prof. James E. Talmage, is that the volume of water from its four tributary rivers is being more and more diverted by irrigation. Prof. Talmage says the water of the lake is growing each year more acid as it shrinks in size and he thinks that in another hundred years it will be replaced by a glittering bed of dry salt.

Prof. Willis G. Johnson of the Maryland Agricultural college thinks hydrocyanic acid gas will soon be used as a means of putting murderers to death. The gas is very deadly and kills quickly and yet people who have been under its influence and have been resuscitated say they felt no pain. Its action is to stupefy and produce unconsciousness, which is soon followed by death.

Prattle of the Youngsters.

"Jimmy, you must not eat with your knife."
"I have to; I'm left-handed."
"What kind of a dog is that, papa?" asked small Johnny, as he observed the big animal chasing his own tail.
"That's a watch dog," replied the father.
"And will he go as soon as he winds himself up?" asked Johnny.

Old Gentleman (in the park)—What are you doing, my little dear?
Little Girl (with doll)—I'm giving dolly a drink.
"Giving dolly a drink, eh? But the water is running down all over her pretty dress."
"Yes, she slobbers a good deal. All babies do."

It was the first time little 4-year-old Willie had ever seen a snake and as it writhed and squirmed along he ran into the house to tell of his discovery.
"Oh, mamma!" he exclaimed, "come here, quick; here's a tail wagging without any dog."

Here is a story from the Old York (Mass.) Transcript: A little flax-haired girl who is the daughter of one of the summer cottagers asked her mamma the other day if she could take her best doll to heaven with her when she died.

"No, child, of course not," replied the fond mamma.

"Then can I take my next best doll to heaven?" continued the child.

"No, they don't have any dolls in heaven," answered the child.

"Then I'll just take my old black doll, Susan, and go to hell," said the little one with a most determined air.

While the distinguished artist was showing his paintings to his guests Bob sat at his mother's elbow rather bored, but quite silent, as became a boy of 7 years, says the Youth's Companion.

At length a spring landscape—brilliantly and wonderfully impressionistic—was placed against the easel. Bob clapped his hand to his mouth.

"Oh!" he gasped. "I very nearly said what I thought!"

"What was that, Bob?" asked the artist.

Bob shook his head stoutly. "I think maybe you would like it better if I thought again!" said he.

"It is better to laugh than to cry," said the young and innocent girl, brightly.
"Not if you are trying to manage a husband," said the woman.

"There goes one of these women's rights reformers."
"How do you know?"
"Don't you see his wife is carrying the baby?"

Way of the World.

When some people are imposed upon they like to boast about it.

The pessimist is a man who would cheat himself playing solitaire.

"Slow, but sure," is a good motto, but why not be quick and sure?

There is no game so silly that there are not some people experts at it.

If anyone hates you overcome his hatred by asking him for any kind of information.

What folly to proclaim a love for humanity which no one has for the majority of individuals composing it.

The young man who believes his employer cannot get along without him is half fired already.

The man who does the least work is the one who does the most talking about having his salary raised.

Those who think a large family handicaps a man should explain how the old-timer who are dying rich and leaving large families made their money.

"A great many people," says the Manapunk Philosopher, "must believe there's luck in old numbers, judging by the way they look out for number one."

Told Out of Court.

"It is not necessary for a woman during courtship," says the judge in a recent case, "to inform her intended husband of any devices or attachments to improve the work of nature in the construction of her face, form or figure." This was apropos of a charge of deception by wearing glasses to conceal a glass eye.

In a suit for infringement of the whiskey trademark, "Knickerbocker," the claim was set up by defendants, named Roosevelt and Schuyler, that, as they belonged to old Dutch families, they were entitled to use the word "Knickerbocker" as their own name. But this contention was disposed of by Judge Boskaster as having "more of ingenuity and humor than of persuasiveness."

C. S. Batterman, one of the best known mining men in the Rocky Mountain states, was on the stand as an expert in an important mining case in Nevada and was under cross examination by a rather young and "smart" attorney. The question related to the form that the ore was found in, generally described as "kidney lumps." "New, Mr. Batterman," said the attorney, "how large are these lumps—you say they are oblong—are they as long as my head?" "Yes," replied Mr. Batterman, "but not as thick." The attorney subsided and even the judge could not help smiling.

"So that young puppy want to take you away from me just as I need you the most?"
"Yes, father," he says every dog has his day, and you have had yours."
