REPUBLICAN COUNTY CONVENTION.

Strongly in Favor of Mr. Tongue's Renomination.

MR. B. L. EDDY FOR JOINT REPRESENTATIVE.

All the County Officials Renominated with the Exception of Commissioner---Headlight's Predictions Proved True.

The republican county convention has done its work—and it was done well and to the satisfaction of republicans throughout the county. Harmony reigned supreme, although under the surface there was considerable scrimmage as to who should control the convention by the different factions previous to its meeting. When figured out the balance of power was in the hands of the delegates who came to the convention untrammeled, independent and determined to do what they thought was the right thing for the republican party and the best interest of the county. This is the only conclusion one can draw. Several things brought this about. The county is overwhelmingly in favor of Congressman Tongue's renomination, and those who were in any way opposing him or attempted to laud other candidates were badly sat down upon. Representative J. W. Maxwell and County Judge G. W. Sappington wanted to be sent as delegates to the state convention, but when they saw that this was not the desire of the convention they gracefully withdrew their names. The convention carried out the Headlight's predictions to the very letter, and if we were a little premature in foretelling the doom which awaited a number of aspirants and the success of others we did so because we had taken a good deal of pains the past few months to find out how the pulse of the republican party in this county beat, and having done so the Headlight simply reflected public opinon as correctly as it knew how, although it may have appeared very distasteful to those who were aspirants for office or wanted to be sent out as delegates. Personally we have the same kindly feeling towards the vanquished as we have the victor, and as to being accused of helping create the sentiment which permeated the convention, perhaps we had just as well plead guilty to carrying out the functions of a newspaper and moulding public opinion, although other forces were actively at work in the same direction. We have some idea who will be on top and who on the bottom two years hence.

In recommending Mr. B. L. Eddy as joint representative and electing delegates to the congressional convention, no one felt disposed to antagonize the convention on Congressman Tongue's renomination. It was well, perhaps, they did not, for nearly all the delegates were ready to jump to their feet in defence of Mr. Tongue, for they were well primed and suspicious of those who might be working in opposite directions. As it was, the much talked off opposition by those who claimed they had the convention by the ear turned out a myth, a regular bluff to intimidate the delegates. When Mr. Eddy was recommend for joint representative it gave those who laid claims to controlling the convention an opportunity to show their hand and strength, but they failed to do so, which gave Mr. Eddy and those proposed as delegates to the congressional convention a walk over. Nominations followed in quick succession, the only new name on the county ticket being that of Mr. L. Parrish for the important position of county commissioners. All the other county officials were renominated as slick and clean as falling off a log, their opponents not having a ghost of a show, and a repetition of this will occur next June, for the boys are swift crackerjacks when it comes to vote getting, a glance at the returns two years ago proving that fact.

Aspirants to be numbered with the state delegation were numerous, and after several futile attempts they had to withdraw from their kobjes, for the same delegates who elected the delegates to the congressional convention also elected those to the state.

The republican ticket is a strong one, with clean, well tried, intelligent nominees, who have shown by their ability and honesty that they can be implicitly trusted for another two years to conduct the affairs of the county with credit and honor to the taxpayers, the republican party and themselves. We congratulate the delegates to the convention for the work they harmoniously performed and to the nominees. Now let all get to work and elect them with big majorities.

The republican county convention was called to order on Saturday in this city by Mr. A. W. Severance, chairman of the central committee, who in doing so made a neat speech reviewing the political situation, the principal features of which dealt with the late war with Spain, and although that was declared for suffering humanity and for the freedom of Cuba, it had placed the United States in possession of new territory which the republican party intended keeping possession of. Republicans were in favor of expansion, while the democratic party was not. Mr. Severance briefly touched upon the stagnation to business which existed four years ago and the prosperity which followed after the republican party had been elected, with Mr. McKinley at the helm. He complimented Congressman Tongue for the high position he had attained by his own industry and ability, who was now in a position to do Tillamook county a vast amount of good in the way of getting government appropriations to improve the harbor, for, the speaker strted, the dairymen lost every year thousands of dollars on account of inadequate transportation service.

On motion, one delegate from each precinct was appointed on the credential committee, viz.: Amos Vaughn, Bay; W. Hoskins, Foley; L. Parrish, Garibaldi; F. Severance, Fairview; F. R. Beals, Hoquarton; A Anderson, Tillamook; Frank Ely, South Prairie; H. E. Palmer, Netarts; J. A. Biggs, Barnegat; C. H. Blake, Carnahan; T. E. Wilson, Beaver; John Moon, Blaine; P. Smith, Hebo; A. Southmayd, Union; W. C. King, Sandlake; Little Nestucca, F. Scherzinger. Mr. W. An Omaha clergyman who indulged in a cakewalk has been asked to resign by the pillars of his church. He protests that he was only taking steps to popularize the church.

The preacher who is pleading for patronage on the score that he is a reformed gambler and drunkard evidently thinks that San Franciscans take kindly to indecent spectacles in a sacred cause.

The clergyman who asks in his pupil, "Would Brooklyn crucify Christ?" knows very well that Brooklyn would not crucify any one. Nor would any American city. Nor would any state or country that pretended to be civilized. It is gravely suspected that some people say things to get their names in yellow papers.

There is strong opposition in Cuba to Mgr. Sbaretti, the newly appointed Catholic bishop of Havana. The people want a Cuban bishop and they have so long been accustomed to the union of church and state that they are unable to see why Governor General Wood does not take a hand in the matter and give them the kind of a bishop they want. They will have to learn that as long as the United States retains control of affairs in Cuba there will be no mixing of church and state.

A Century of Migration.

The greatest migration that history has recorded is that of the European races during the century now closing. Up to 1820 only about 250,000 foreigners moved to this country, which has many fold surpassed all the rest of America in accessions to its population through immigration; but between 1820 and 1882 more than 17,000,000 Europeans left their homes for the Americas and other parts of the new world.

The high tide of the European exodus was reached in 1882, when the United States alone received 800,000 immigrants. The two next greatest years in this movement of population were 1888 and 1892, in which two years this country saw 1,140,000 Europeans enter its ports. Between 1882 and 1893 the European outpouring to various parts of the word was over 9,000,000 souls. Then followed a decline in the volume of migration this country receiving only a little over 300,000 immigrants in 1894 and 200,000 in 1897, while arrivals in other regions, notably in Brazil and Argentina, about held their own or increased. In the six years ending with 1899 about 30,000,000 persons seeking to better their fortunes in other lands.

The world never before saw anything comparable with this tremendous movement of people in so short a space of time. The population that Europe has thus lost in 100 years is greater than the total number of inhabitants of Great Britain and Ireland in 1860, and only a little less than the number in the United States in the same year. It represents a third more people than Great Britain and Ireland gained in population in the first ninety years of the century. It is equal to three-fifths of the total population of Europe in the time of Augustus Ceasar. If the ships on which these emigrants embarked carried, on an average, 500 passengers, 60,000 trips have been made in ferrying them to their new homes.

No probability can be deserned that any later century will see the equal of this migration. The fairest parts of the world that were wilderness in 1800 now teem with industry and population. There are no more virgin lands to occupy; no more such enticements to draw millions from the homes of their fathers.

Imposture.

A certain candidate was soliciting the suffrages of the electors as a farmer. In proof that he was a farmer he showed a gold brick which he had once bought.

But I knew he was an imposter and at the proper time I publicly exposed him.

"The brick" I asserted, "is genuine gold!"

The fellow did not dare deny; he was covered with confusion, and had no standing after that.

Standing Up For His Town.

The loafers sitting about the stove in the barroom of the country hotel looked up as the athletic drummer with the sample cases came in and registered his name.

"Pretty cold day," one of them ventured to remark.

"Yes."

"Where do you come from?" hazarded another.

"I'm from Kalamazoo," he said, wheeling around and facing them, "and I can lick any man that laughs at it!"

It is not alone in mercantile and industrial lines of business that labor has been more amply rewarded and capital has received better returns from its investments since the arrival of the prosperous period inaugurated by the return to a Republican administration of national affairs. While the laborer has found employment which was denied him in the days of Democratic depression and has had his wages gradually and perceptibly increased, the farmer has also been receiving his share of the general prosperity.

Missonri farmers during last fall lost a great many horses from sickness which was mysterious in origin, unknown in character, and obstinate to all treatment. In Vernon county the losses were very numerous, and one farmer, who examined a number of the carcasses of the dead horses, announces that the sickness was caused by grasshopper eggs in the fodder fed to the animals. There has been a scourge of grasshoppers in Missouri, and countless eggs were laid by the insects.

The decision of the supreme court of the United States, sustaining the validity of the Texas anti-trust law, is one of the most effective blows that has been aimed at the great combinations of capital, known as trusts, against which so much popular clamor has been raised. While the merits of the measure did not enter fully into the case decided, the court held that the statues of the state were blinding upon the Standard Oil company, the trust in the case, because the company had accepted the laws and attempted to do business under them. The decision is only another link in the chain of conditions which is making the way of the trust more difficult each day. It is an indication that the problem will be solved in a satisfactory manner as are most questions that come before the American people.
