Obituary.

Raymond E. Coulson was born in Morgan county, Ohio, August 26th, 1889, and came to Oregon with his parents in 1895. While playing with his brother Harry near Bewley creek, October 9th, 1900, he accidentally fell into the water and before help could be obtained was drowned. His body was recovered 25 or 30 minutes later, but life had become extinct and all efforts to resuscitate him proved fruitless. His remains were taken to Beaver for interment. The funeral services, which were largely attended, were held in the U. B. Church at Beaver, and conducted by Rev. B. H. Dollarhide, Free Methodist Elder of Tillamook City, assisted by Rev. T. E. Armstrong, resident pastor of U. B. Church of Beaver. Among the many relatives present was one great uncle, Rev. C. Mills and wife, also grand father and grand mother. The public school of Beaver adjourned that the pupils might attend the services. The bereaved ones have the heart felt sympathy of the community at large.

Little Raymond leaves behind him father and mother, two brothers, and three sisters, one little sister having preceded him to the glory world.

The household bond is broken,
A dear form laid to rest,
A loving spirit gathered home
To the dear Saviour's breast.

Oh Raymond, darling Raymond,
We'll see you here no more,
But when life's scenes are over,
We'll greet you on that shore.

A Card of Thanks.

We, the undersigned, hereby express our sincere thanks to the people of South Prairie and the logging camp, also the people of Beaver and vicinity, for their sympathy extended to us as manifested by their deeds and words of kindness at the time of our sad bereavement.

MR. AND MRS. T. E. COULSON.

BARNEGAT.

The Johnson Bors. have shut down their logging camp for the winter, and getting their logs to the mills as fast as they can. One large raft was taken away last Friday. When they wind up their rafting they will have about 800,000.

Al Biggs, who was working in the camp, left yesterday for his home in Tillamook City.

The sheriff must have visited Barnegat last week, for I see election notices tacked up all around, and I suppose there will be a hot time in Barnegat November the 6th, 1900.

Perley Hiatt moved away from Barnegat the fore part of last week.

Bert Biggs made a trip up the Tillamook river last Tuesday.

Mr. Higney and son, also Mr. Morgan, who lives west of the ferry on the Tillamook river, were visitors at Barnegat Sunday.

This is a description of the country around Barnegat, which is located on the south side of Tillamook Bay. The land is very productive when cleared of timber and brush. Cape Meares mountain is covered with a fine lot of timber—spruce and hemlock—which is vacant yet. There are several vacant places here along the sand spit, which would be very desirable for summer homes. These places are all located near a good school-house on the ocean beach. Some of those places are farms and for rent and some are for sale. Those wishing homes or summer homes at a resort, this is one of the finest places along the coast. There are five miles of ocean beach. One of the healthiest places in the state, and is eight miles northwest of Tillamook City.

Tables Turn'd on Train Robbers.

There are signs of improvement among the men whose duty it is to care for railway trains in the West. For the most part—and not unnaturally—one or two train robbers have been able to inspire a whole train load, crew and passengers, with terror.

Passengers do not set out on railroad rides as if going to war. They have not felt that they had anything to do with taking care for the train. The train men, though differently situated, have generally seemed to be about as unready as the passengers.

But things are improving. A few nights ago a brakeman near Denver routed a would-be robber with a well directed blow with a railway train man's lantern. On Tuesday night a cool-headed express messenger on the Burlington road near Council Bluffs shot one of two hold-up gentlemen dead, whereupon the other took to his heels.

This is as it should be. When men with a leaning toward train robbery become satisfied that the train crews are as ready to shoot as they are themselves, train robbing will have no more attractions in their eyes.

Express Messenger Baxter deserves the thanks of the public, and more.

How to Cook a Husband.

More than a decade ago, in the Baltimore Cooking School, the following receipt for "Cooking a Husband so as to make him tender and good," was contributed by a lady, presumably of experience. We commend it to our lady readers:

"A good many husbands are ruined by mismanagement. Some women go about as if their husbands were bladders, and blow them up. Others keep them constantly in hot water; others let them freeze by their carelessness and influence. Some keep them in a stew by irritating ways and words. Others roast them. Some keep them in a pickle all their lives. It cannot be supposed that any husband will be tender and good managed in this way, but they are really delicious when properly treated. In selecting your husband you should not be guided by the silvery appearance, as in buying mackerel, nor by the golden tint, as if you wanted salmon. Be sure and select him yourself, as the tastes differ. Do not go to the market for him, as the best are always brought to your door. It is far better to have none unless you patiently learn how to cook him. A preserving kettle of finest porcelain is best, but if you have nothing but an earthenware pipkin it will do, with care. See that the linen in which you wrap him is nicely washed and mended, with the required number of buttons and strings nicely sewed on. Tie him in the kettle by a strong silk cord called comfort, as the one called duty is apt to be weak. They are apt to fly out of the kettle and be burned and crusty on the edges, since, like crabs and lobsters, you have to cook them alive. Make a clear, steady fire out of love, neatness and cheerfulness. Set him as near this seems to agree with him. If he sputters and fizzes do not be anxious; some husbands do this until they are quite done. Add a little sugar in the form of confectioners call kisses, but no vinegar or pepper on any account. A little spice improves them, but it must be used with judgment. Do not stick any sharp instruments into him to see if he is becoming tender. Stir him gently, watch the while, lest he lie too close and flat to the kettle, and so become useless. You cannot fail to know when he is done. If thus treated you will find him very digestible, agreeing nicely with you and the children, and he will keep as long as you want, unless you become careless and you set him in too cold a place."—Pacific Monthly.

Short Stories.

The Dutch commander who had charge of all the British prisoners taken after the battle of Glencoe, Dundee and Nicholson's Nek has told Mr. Davitt the following interesting little story:

Going his rounds at midnight on one occasion he was astonished to see an English soldier acting as a Boer sentinel over the prisoners and on the commandant demanding an explanation "Tommy" offered the following extraordinary account of his transformation from a prisoner to sentinel over himself and fellow prisoners:

"Well, sir, this 'ere poor little chap," pointing to the sleeping form of a Boer lad 15 years old, "was dead broke for sleep after two nights of dooty. I takes pity on the little chap an' I says: 'Look 'ere, you're regular done up, you are, that's sartin. You give me your rifle and take a bit o' sleep an' I'll do sentry go for you, I will. Honor bright! I won't do nothing wrong, blow me if I do!' So the little chap went off. It's all right, sir; don't blame him, plea se. he's only a kid!"

"I was assured," adds Mr. Davitt, "that neither 'the kid' nor the kinl hearted English prisoner suffered over the unique incident."

It is notorious, says the Youth's Companion, that the handwriting of the scholar sometimes does little credit to his learning. Ingenious but illogical schoolboys have generalized from such insufficient premises that the worse their writing the brighter their chances of becoming learned men. From a parental point of view the argument seems radically unsound, but that the premise is sometimes true is beyond question. Miss Caroline Ticknor tells an amusing story of Rufus Choate.

Her grandfather, George Ticknor, the historian of Spanish literature, was once called as a witness, in a case in which Mr. Choate was engaged as counsel. Sitting beside the eminent lawyer, during the progress of the trial, he was attracted by Mr. Choate's notes of the evidence.

He found that he could not read a word of them. After studying them a short time he remarked to Mr. Choate that the writing reminded him of two autograph letters in his possession, one of Emanuel, "the Fortunate," of Portugal, dated 1512, and the other of Gonzalvo de Cordova, the "Great Captain," as he was called written a few years earlier. Any one who had glanced over these remarkable specimens of chirography would marvel that it is possible to make out a syllable of such illegible scrawls.

"These letters," Mr. Ticknor assured Mr. Choate, "were written 350 years ago, and strongly resemble your notes of the present trial."

Choate's reply was instantaneous: "Remarkable men, no doubt; they seem to have been much in advance of their time."

Prefers Jail to Matrimony.

Robert W. Jarvis, prominent in Vine-land, N. J., is locked in jail at Bridgeton, because he would not and will not marry Miss Carrie M. Robinson, also of Vine-land.

Miss Robinson sues for $10,000 because Jarvis promised to marry her but wont. The New Jersey supreme court decrees that Jarvis must give bail for $1,500 to defend the suit, and because he can't produce it he is in a cell.

Sheriff Holmes reports that Jarvis weeps continually in his cell, bemoaning his fate. But he vows that rather than marry Miss Carrie Robinson he would spend his life in prison.

It is a romantic story that Miss Robinson tells. Jarvis had been paying court to her for more than a year, she says, and she grew to love him deeply.

When he proposed she accepted, happy in a prospective life of love and contentment. The engagement had become generally known among her friends, though no definite date for the wedding had been set.

Once Miss Robinson asked that the wedding date be decided soon. But Jarvis protested that he was working hard to make sure provision for her, and she was happy in believing him. To gladden his hours of labor she used to take flowers to his real estate office.

One unhappy day, when Miss Robinson called at her fiancé's office with a large bunch of roses for him, the door was closed. Next day it was closed. At last Jarvis slammed the door in her face, she says, and told her to be gone, for he no longer loved her.

A Montclair man has named his baby "Alfalfa" because it has cut so many teeth in one season.

General MacArthur has issued an order compelling the Manila saloons to be closed every night at 10 o'clock. According to the Denver idea this is the rankest of militarism.
