on the others, with shifting, shallow and treacherous bars which only small coasting vessels can cross to reach the mainland, Tillamook county has never had the opportunity to develop its resources or add to the commercial wealth or industrial progress of Oregon as other parts of the state. True, in previous years other parts of the state urgently need government improvements, and this having, more or less, been accomplished, Tillamook can with good grace, after waiting patiently, ask the attention of the river and harbor committee to consider the situation and sanction what improvements are necessary for the development of the county. This is of much importance to the manufacturing interest not only of the county but the state as well, and the Oregon delegation in Washington should leave no stone unturned, even if it has to go about it in true Western style, to enforce its necessary demands.

Almost every voter has discussed the political issues in some way or other, and in a few days they will be called upon to cast their ballots. If you think that the cursed drink should be prohibited from being manufactured, then your man is Woolley; if you're an anti-expansionist, anti-imperialist, who favors governing the Filipinos the same as the Cubans, then vote for Bryan; if you're an expansionist, and favors the annexation of the Philippine islands, and believes in McKinley's protective policy, then vote the republican ticket. But no matter who is elected the country will jog along just the same. Tillamook cows will give just as much milk and the manufacturing industries will continue in run as heretofore, provided the trusts are throttled, as they should be, and all honor to the political party which will throttle them.

NEEDS A RAILROAD.

All That Tillamook County Lacks to Become Famous.

J. C. West, a Tillamook County hotel man and dairyman, returned yesterday from a trip to Minnesota. He found times dull in the Red River Valley, he said, on account of the poor crops, and farmers were pretty generally disheartened.

"There was no rain from seeding time in the Spring until the first of July," he said, "and then rain began falling in torrents and what harvest there might have been was ruined in the fields."

He expresses himself as glad to get back again where rains are abundant when they are needed, and where the farmer has a better chance to harvest his grain while the sun shines.

Mr. West's farm is at Beaver, on the wagon road between Sheridan and Tillamook, in a locality becoming noted for its large dairy interest. It was originally a wooded country, where the shade was too deep to permit the growth of grass, but the clearings that have been made were planted to clover, timothy and mesquite, and now the milch cows luxuriate in great pastures the year around. He sells his butter fat to a nearby cheese factory for 20 cents a pound, and the whey which is returned to him is valued at 10 cents per 100 pounds for fattening hogs.

"A man with 100 cows," he said, "can produce 10,000 pounds of pork in a season from this whey, and we have a good market in Portland for all the fat hogs we raise."

"The crying need of Tillamook County, however, is a railroad to connect via the West Side line with Portland. Such a road would develop our country rapidly and bring us near the world's markets. At present the bulk of our coast products find their way to San Francisco, and the returns, therefore, come slowly. With a direct line of rail to Portland, butter and cheese might be shipped daily to this city at comparatively small cost for freight. Some of our people think they don't want a railroad, as they are doing very well now, and a line would tend to fill up all the vacant lands. My opinion is that a railroad would help us all very much. A natural grade can be found between Sheridan and Beaver, and the cost of constructing the line would be comparatively light, considering the business it would create. A preliminary survey was made some years ago between Albany and Astoria, and this line would pass close to Beaver postoffice, but our people have long since lost faith in the promoters' ability to construct the road. We live in hopes, however, of finally making direct rail connection with this city. The Tillamook county is too rich in natural resources to be neglected much longer. We can produce a pound of butter cheaper than any other portion of the globe, and when we can get this product to market the fame of Tillamook County will soon become world-wide."—Oregonian.

"Maw, do cats eat money?" asked little Willie.

"No, my son. Why do you ask?"

"I heard paw say that the kitty ate up $4.25 last night."

"Charley Hobson is a conceited puppy," said the Sweet Young Thing.

"Why do you say that?" asked her friend.

"Because he imagines I am in love with him."

"Do you really think that is good proof, dear?"

Junior Partner—"I examined our cashier's books last night, after he went home, and I shall discharge him at once."

Senior Partner—"Vot has he done?"

Junior Partner—"He forgot to draw a week's salary last January, vile his vile vas sick. I shall fire him kervick, before he remembers it."

The friends of Miss Louisa Goeres in this city were surprised to hear of the death of that young lady at her parents' home at Neskowin last week, the result of typhoid fever contracted while at the hop fields. Uncle Sam's family has grown to be 76,295,220 in numbers, and we guess he's proud of them, even though one of the political parties call their opponents "anarchists," "hoodlums," etc., who report by accusing their opponents of defending trusts, ignoring the constitution, etc. But there's a political campaign on and some of the boys are allowed a little levity for political effect, that's all.

When a malignant and infectious disease once makes its appearance in any city it should be immediately quarantined and the houses well disinfected, even before the sickness is over. Some people ridicule the idea of such restrictions, but common sense and intelligence convinces every one that infectious diseases cannot and should not be trifled with. Had proper precaution been taken, a fresh case of scarlet fever would not be cropping out every once in a while from the epidemic of two years ago. It is time it was stamped out.

We are glad to notice that the tardiness in the public school shows a marked decrease from the previous week, falling from 140 to 65. Even this should be improved upon if parents would take a little more interest in the regular attendance of their children at school. As we have stated before, the directors and the teachers are doing what they can to give the school a good reputation, and it is only just that parents and pupils should do their part. Progressing as Tillamook city is, we must have a progressive public school.

In a partial list of money to be recommended by the river and harbor committee, the sum of $15,000 is put down for Tillamook bay. As $25,000 was appropriated in the last river and harbor bill, and as a like sum remains unappropriated to carry out the work now in progress, we think an effort should be made to increase the appropriation to $25,000, as it took considerable money out of the last appropriation to provide a dredger and other appliances to carry on the work. Besides, it is just as well to procure enough money to keep the dredger at work the whole year, for it is no satisfaction to see the dredger tied up part of the year when it is imperative, for the commerce of the port, that the work should not be delayed. What, however, concerns Tillamook most is the petition to be presented to the river and harbor committee praying for the improvement of Tillamook bar, giving it twenty-two feet of water at low tide. The development of Tillamook county greatly depends upon the action of the river and harbor committee. Hemmed in as the county is by the Coast range of mountains on the one side and the sea,
