

PROFITABLE DAIRYING IN TILLAMOOK.

The Amount of Money Twenty Cows brings to Industrious Dairymen in Tillamook County.

We have before us the monthly statements of Mr. J. F. Martin, one of Tillamook's industrious dairymen, which is but one out of hundreds of like statements which could be published at this time as a result of dairying in Tillamook county last year, showing what a profitable industry it is, especially when people locate in an ideal dairying country like this, where an abundance of green feed can be procured nearly the whole year. Mr. J. F. Martin came to Tillamook county ten years ago with very little money after experiencing several years of crop failures in Kansas, and not in robust health when he located in the county. He has now a well improved farm, well stocked, all paid for, and money in the bank. This is the experience of quite a number of dairymen in Tillamook county, who, having tried farming in the middle states with failure of crops in summer and blizzards in winter, eventually located here to find, to their great satisfaction, that they had "struck it rich." Mr. Martin is one of the directors of South Prairie Creamery, and, consequently, took his milk to that institution to be manufactured into butter. He milked 20 cows last year, which gave 130,961 pounds of milk, and this produced 5,058 pounds of butter fat. When manufactured it made 5,874 pounds of butter, and after deducting $146.85, or 2 1/2% per pound, for manufacturing, gave Mr. Martin a net profit of $1,018.96 for his milk from the creamery for his twenty cows, making an average of $50.93 for each cow, or, not including the cost of manufacturing the butter, $58.29 per cow. To this can be added at least $10 per head for young stock and hogs raised on the skim milk. These figures are no exception to the rule where dairymen have weeded out from their dairy herds cows which do not give good tests; in fact, as there is a friendly contention between the dairymen who take their milk to the creameries and those who take it to the cheese factories, from figures already published, the cheese factory returns will average from 5c. to 7c. per pound higher last year than those at the creameries. This can be accounted for that shipping facilities are irregular for butter, and instead of the butter reaching market in the splendid condition in which it is manufactured, it is sometimes two, three, four and five weeks before it can reach market. Yet with this disadvantage, dairying, as the following statements will prove, is a profitable industry and knocks wheat raising to smithereens:

"SANDLAKE STALWARTS."

Wrestle With Chuck Holes and Improve Roads.

As everyone knows, the roads in district No. 13 were something out of the usual order of things, in fact they were in such a condition that a person could not travel them without breaking something—one of the commandments, for instance. As the people of Sandlake are of a kindly disposition and with humane inclinations, they viewed with sorrow the condition of affairs, for if all the cuss words, both large and small, were recorded in the Headlight the editor would have to work his staff overtime and enlarge his paper to make room for them—and, by the way, we feel glad that it is not one of the duties of the Headlight to be the recorder of our sins, for most of us would bug our eyes out to see all our sins recorded in cold print in the home newspaper. So with determination in our minds we decided to mend our ways and relieve the weary traveler—both man and beast—from falling into chuck holes and wallowing in mud, to be followed by a torrent of righteous cuss words. Having gathered up as many tools as we could borrow from neighbors and rustled up a good sized grub-stake, on the 2nd January the "Sandlake Stalwarts" took possession of Mr. T. White's place, and having killed off the wood rats, started house-keeping on an extensive scale, with Mrs. Ollie Osburn at the head of the culinary department. With a lot of hard work the stalwarts succeeded in cross-laying and covering up 479 rods of first-class mud holes, cutting 110 rods of new grade and building one 82 feet bridge, the material for which was hewn out with an ax, a maul and a wedge or two, but, notwithstanding, they made a good substantial job in the construction of the bridge. With another winter's work like this, Sandlake will have a good road to Tillamook's metropolis. Everyone turned out this winter with the exception of one, and he will enjoy the road if he did not help make it, so we have no kick coming, in fact, we have quit kicking and won't even kick at the county court, but hope when the county judge or commissioners drive to Sandlake they will enjoy riding over the improvements. But the men are not entitled to all the credit, for the women who stayed at home and milked the cows and did the chores and never complained are just as much right, if not more so, to be called "Sandlake Stalwarts" as the men. Following are the names of the parties who volunteered to work and the number of whole days they put in, which with parts of days as well, amounted to about 300 days' work in all:

Philosophic Sidelights.

Man best knows his own faults and is least willing to admit them.
Money makes men rich in purse, but poor in spirit.
The result of a collision between a negative and a positive thought is nothing.
One way to measure your wife's disposition is to walk on the parlor carpet with muddy shoes.
Of course marriage is for lover, but Cupid gets mighty active around a bank roll.
Certainty of punishment is probably not as great a deterrent of crime as the nature of the certainty.

Pointed Paragraphs.

Clubs are trumps in the policeman's game.
It's a good reputation that can't acquire a spot.
Wealth makes kleptomaniacs; poverty makes thieves.
Judicious silence is an eloquent indication of wisdom.
The strong man is weak if he lacks confidence in himself.
Strange to say, the ice crop is never harvested with icicles.
Straitened circumstances cause many a man to become crooked.
The sky is most cheerful when bluest; but it is different with men.
An enemy is a man who injures you and then refuses to forgive you.

Eachelor Reflections.

A woman never feels comfortably dressed unless her corsets are uncomfortable.
Up to the day he falls in love no man has any idea that he will ever find his ideal woman.
It isn't always the prettiest girl that gets the best husband, but it's her own fault if she doesn't.

Every woman has two beliefs—one is a future life and the other is that if a cat has blue eyes it can't hear well.
When a man gets married, no matter what a poor thing he is, there is always a woman somewhere to wonder what he ever saw in her.

Quaint Features of Life.

Several small boys were brought up before Recorder Hensel of West Hoboken, N. J., recently on the charge of "crap shooting." The youngest was asked by the recorder: "Where did you get the money with which to play craps?" "My mother gave me a quarter for being a good boy, sir," replied the youthful gambler. He received the minimum fine.

B. Frank King, of Sutton, Mass., while butchering a cow, found, on opening the animal's stomach, that it contained all the running gear of an ordinary sized mantle clock, two stones, each the size of a hen's egg, and a number of pieces of glass. The cow was apparently healthy and did not show any signs of indigestion, but, on the contrary, ate everything that had been fed her with great relish. Mr. King said the clock works had nearly worn their way through the lining of the stomach.

Charles Bellamy, a fireman in the service of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy road, has been at work nineteen years without losing a single day through sickness or other cause. There are 6,935 days in nineteen years. Deducting from these 988 Sundays, it would appear that Mr. Bellamy had been in the harness 5,947 days without a break. Sixteen years of this period Mr. Bellamy has given to railroad work and three years to service on a farm. He was born June 9, 1864, at Eighty Eight, Ky. His mother and three brothers still reside in Kentucky.

J. S. Schilling, of Enterprise, Kan., whose saloon was demolished recently by Mrs. Nation, and whose wife in turn attacked Mrs. Nation, has this to say: "I did not get a fair deal. Myself, wife and child were through the Galveston storm and came back penniless. A Junction City firm gave me some money to start in business, and I went to Enterprise to look over the field. I went to Mayor Emmet Hoffman, son of C. B. Hoffman, and asked him about it. He said: 'All right, your fine will be $50 a month.' I had two talks with him, and he seemed entirely friendly to me. After I paid $50 the time was extended to two months, and at this rate I have paid. At any time Mayor Hoffman had told me to quit I would have quit gladly, for I wanted no trouble. Yet nothing was said, and $50 was paid after I have reason to know that the Hoffmans knew Mrs. Nation was coming. I am going to ask the return of this money, and I think I ought to have it. Common fairness would have prevented all the trouble."

The Worcester (Mass.) Spy prints a letter from a soldier serving in the Ninth United States infantry in China, in which he says: "If I could have taken care of and safely handled all the loot and plunder which I had and could have got I would return to the United States a rich man, easily worth from $25,000 to $30,000, but I couldn't do it and had to get rid of what did fall into my hands as quickly as possible. I sold nearly $1,000 worth of loot. I had silver bullion galore, beautiful and costly furs of all kinds, silk in abundance and a great variety of precious stones and jewels, but I could not carry it, so had to dispose of it as quickly as I could. I sold $1,500 worth of pure bar silver for $200 Mexican money, equal to $100 in gold. I have often stated in my palmy days that I would like to have all the wealth I could carry, and here is a case of where I have it. But it avails me nothing, as the poor enlisted man gets nothing out of the affair but hardtack and with but one-fourth rations at that. Many of the officers have secured enough out of the affair to be wealthy for life, and the higher the rank the more loot they got. When you read in the paper of the Americans not looting, you can just wink the other eye and be wise. The Americans and the English were dead in the game, and the English got a trifle more than the Yanks, because they were a trifle smarter. The Japanese are the finest soldiers in the world today, any way you take them, and any nation wants to think twice before bumping up against them."
