It's Tillamook's Opportunity.

Of course Tillamook is too far off the line of march to expect the president of the United States to visit this county, although we should be pleased to offer him the glad hand of welcome as they are doing in other parts. There is one thing, however, of far more importance to Tillamook than even that, and that is the visit of the river and harbor committee to the Pacific Coast this summer, and a strong effort should be made to induce the committee to visit Tillamook. This is important and no stone should be left unturned to bring it about, for it will be to this committee next winter that we shall be looking for an appropriation to straighten out Hoquarnton slough and for preliminary steps to be taken for the improvement of Tillamook bar. These improvements are imperative, and if the committee could be shown how meritorious they are, it would not be nearly as much trouble for the Oregon delegation to secure an appropriation for Tillamook. This is Tillamook's opportunity, and if we fail to invite the committee and secure the co-operation of the Oregon delegation to that end we are inclined to think that we shall rue the day for being so indifferent about our business, industrial and commercial progress and development. But what are we going to do about it?

Gambling and its Results.

Bishop Lawrence, in his annual address to the Massachusetts diocesan convention of the Protestant Episcopal church, touches upon a pernicious habit which is impregnated to a large extent in the human race—that of gambling. And this is especially true in the United States, for in every city of the country, no matter how small, we see its bad effect upon a certain class of the community, and for this reason it is time that a sentiment was created to check its growth. It is strange, but it is nevertheless a fact, that as soon as a person becomes infatuated with gambling there is a tendency to plunge deeper into the game of chance, until it eventually ruins them financially. Many smart, intelligent business men have been ruined in this way, and to the sober, thoughtful citizen this is a state of affairs which should not exist, for it has a bad moral effect upon the country. The general public lose confidence in those who gamble, and it is right to withdraw this confidence. Gambling has been trifled with too long, although we have no sympathy with the person who tries to buck professional gamblers and beat a man at his own game. Such fools deserve to lose their money and we do not begrudge the gamblers their winning when they make a big haul in this way, for fools and their money soon part. But where gambling becomes a moral crime is where men use money for that purpose which should go towards the support of their families and to pay their legitimate debts and store bills. As long, however, as the tendency to gamble prevails, it is only natural to expect that the smart ones in the gambling fraternity will scoop in the hard earned wages of a good many men, and they are not likely to quit as long as it is a profitable business.

Bishop Lawrence's remarks cannot be refuted, because he paints a picture which all know to be too true. He says: "One only has to listen to the spouts in the stock market during the past few weeks, to be impressed with the danger in which our young men and women, our boys and girls stand from the temptation to gambling, to get something for nothing, to make money fast, to hazard what is of value simply for the pleasure of the hazard."

"I am not drawing fine distinctions, much less am I making the stock market the scapegoat for an increasing popular danger and vice. Vicious gambling which catches the popular eye is but the symptom of a spirit prevailing in the community that of an uneasiness to work steadily for the legitimate reward of labor, an unrest at the moderate and fair returns of capital, a making haste to get rich, a keen love of the sport of over-reaching another, a fascination in living by one's wits instead of by one's sober thoughts and careful work."

"Two generations ago playing cards was forbidden because it was associated with gambling. Then the cards were brought forth from their hiding places and given a place in the innocent amusements of the home. Today they are returning to their old calling as the instrument of gambling. There are men, and men worshipers in our churches, some even communicants, who waste the daylight and concentrate all their thoughts and nerve upon the game—and the game is not complete without some stake smaller or large."

"What will you give for the future of the boy whose pin money is the gain of his father's game at the club?"

"The point I want to make is that instead of dwelling on the excesses of the stock market or criticising the police for not suppressing the worst forms of gambling, we should look to ourselves and discover the symptoms of the same vice in us."

Tough Rules for Tough People.

We come across men quite often who are impressed with the idea that it is a good thing, if one is going to be mean, selfish or a thief, to be as bad as it is possible to be. We feel sorry for such people, because they belong to a class which demoralizes rather than elevates society. To those, however, who entertain this silly notion and want to become conspicuous along these lines, let's lay down a few rules for their guidance, but if it lands them in the penitentiary or causes them to become the most cursed and dishonorable persons in the community we hope they will not blame us.

Always be a nice, smooth sucker. A sucker always makes a success.

In the presence of the man who has money be a mealy-mouthed, velvet-hand ed, affair; in the presence of a poor man swell up like a toy balloon.

Always try and make yourself disagreeable to anyone who can't help himself.

To anyone who can take you by the scruff of your scrawny neck and twist said neck, always be a perfect gentleman, so far as your ability in that line goes.

Always be willing to lie about anyone that exceeds you. Always be willing to do him dirt behind his back and misrepresent him as much as you dare. Then when he jumps on you, get down in the dust and stick up your feet like a mongrel cur and say you don't know a thing about it. Then hate him like a poisonous snake because he stepped on your head.

Always be a hypocrite.

Always take everything you can lay your hands on providing you take enough to bribe justice; a small thief is a fool. Always lie when it does you good.

Always worm yourself into an honest man's confidence, and if it is of any advantage to you don't have any qualms in betraying him, that is, if you are not afraid of punishment.

Be selfish.

Be merciless.

If you hold a position of power, grind those who are under you.

Do the other fellow, and don't pay any attention to the blackness of the methods you use to do him.

Be a liar, a thief and a thing without a heart and you will be successful today; that is if you are not caught.

Then when you come to die, howl like a good man for a preacher and say you are exceedingly sorry, since in your last selfishness you think a death bed repentance will save you.

And don't forget to will your money to some institution that doesn't need it.

Commissioners' Court.

Following is a continuation of the business transacted before the Commissioners' Court last week:

The court accepted the bond of Lewis Johnson, who had been appointed road master, in the sum of $2,000, with C. E. Hadley and George Coffin bondsmen.

P. H. M. Smith filed his bond as supervisor of road district No. 1, with Peter Brant as bondsman, which was approved.

The court fixed rate of toll for the Little Nestucca Toll Road Company as follows:

Four wheel vehicle.....	$1 00
Two ".....	50
Saddle or pack horse.....	25
Loose stock.....	10
Sheep or hogs.....	2

To fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of P. Heisel as road supervisor of district No. 4, P. F. Ducham was appointed to fill the place.

Marcus D. Swabb having failed to file a bond as supervisor of road district No. 12, the court ordered the office declared vacant and appointed G. W. Wallace to fill the vacancy.

Aug. C. Kautz, supervisor of road district No. 17, having failed to file a bond, the office was declared vacant and Frank Wallace was appointed to fill the place.

Charles Keller, supervisor of road district No. 18 having failed to file a bond, the office was declared vacant and C. Ghristenson was appointed to that position.

Andrew Anderson, supervisor of road district No. 6 having failed to file a bond the office was declared vacant, and W. B. Alderman was mentioned to fill the place.

It was ordered that until July 1901, the County Clerk issue the proper redemption certificates for any lands heretofore bid in by the county at tax sales on payment of the tax and all costs charged on the rolls against said land without other penalty, in accordance with the act of the legislature approved Feb. 23, 1901.

To Marry or Not to Marry.

Mother says, "Be in no hurry, Marriage oft means care and worry."
 Auntie says, with manner grave, "Wife is synonyme of slave."
 Father asks, in tones commanding, "How does Bradstreet rate his standing?"
 Sister, crooning to her twins, Sighs, "With marriage care begins."
 Grandma, near life's closing day, Murmurs "Sweet are girlhood's ways."
 Maud, twice widowed (sod and grass), Looks at me and moans "Alas!"
 They are six, and I am one, Life for me has just begun.
 They are older, calmer, wiser, Age should aye be youth's adviser.
 They must know—and yet, dear m., When in Harry's eyes I see
 All the world of love there burning— On my six advisers turning,
 I make answer, "Oh, but Harry Is not like most men who marry."
 "Fate has offered me a prize, Life with love means paradise."
 "Life without it is not worth All the foolish joys of earth."
 So in spite of all they say I shall name the wedding day.
