The death of young Vaughn is another instance which goes to prove that it is the young men who need life protection in our fraternal orders as well as the older men.

Congressman Tongue's views on irrigation are sound, but as they hardly interest Tillamookers, where we obtain 150 inches of rain annually, irrigation is not a burning issue in this county.

Agricultural papers are full of articles on balanced rations for all kinds of stock which is certainly the proper thing, but little is said on balanced rations for mankind, for whom all of these animals exist.

It seems impossible for a newspaper to please everybody, for the editor is being scolded already because he did not mention a good many other things which could be said about the Sappington "graft."

Look out! The untimely anti-expansion democrats are preparing to make their little debut. Gentlemen, we welcome you into the political arena where the republican party never intends hauling down the Stars and Stripes.

The political sentiment in Tillamook this year is:
Anti-Simon
Anti-Maxwell
Anti-Sappington
And anti those with either of these earmarks.

We are sorry to have to admit it, but most of the former editors and proprietors of the HEADLIGHT have figured in divorce proceedings. We must ask our brothers in the newspaper profession to pray for us, and we will pray for our predecessors' happiness.

Sappington will promise any old thing just now in the way of roads and bridges for political support, and probably he would not object to a silent partnership if he could pull the wool over your eyes. But Sappington's promises are only air balls.

If you want a new road, planked road, gravelled road, new bridge, or any old thing from the county, petition the court and it is safe to predict that Sappington will promise everything that is asked for, especially if the can't-fizzle people with political promises.

The Portland, Nehalem & Tillamook Railroad Company has expended—hold your breath—the enormous sum, during the past 18 months, $111.57. The HEADLIGHT hopes that this amount of money, taken from the channels of trade, won't break Portland in business.

The tin horn gamblers want tin horn gamblers to run the republican party of this county and tin horn gamblers for county officials. This is a fact which we think we are justified in calling public attention to. Look at the men they have on their slate so as to convince yourself.

If you haven't been in the county, say, for twenty years or so and became a fossilized factional leader or henchman, you have no right to say a word about politics in Tillamook, and should be as mute as a kitten. That is some people's ideas, but they are being killed off quite fast.

What would it cost to put in a box drain from the corner of the school building to the slough? As the water there is a bad sight in the heart of the city, draining it does several dozen black around that vicinity, we would suggest that the city council ascertain what it could be done for.

Notice the contrast. Congressman Tongue is attending to his duties like a faithful servant of the people at Washington. Senator Simon has left the national capital for Oregon for his own political interests. Hence, it can be seen, that Simon's interests, in his own estimation, are far more important than that of the State of Oregon.

It is freely asserted by those who are in a position to know that the republican county convention nominates G. W. Sappington for County Judge again, ex-County Judge W. W. Conley will allow his name to go before the democratic convention as an opponent to Sappington. The result would be that Conley would poll four votes to Sappington's one.

The city council discussed for some time on Monday evening where to obtain the water for the proposed city water system, and it seemed to be the consensus of opinion that to get an abundance of water the north fork of the Wilson river was the proper place, although the committee has been negotiating in regard to the Chance creek, which seems to lack sufficient water in the dry season.

It will be noticed that the Portland, Nehalem & Tillamook Railway Company does not propose to come to Tillamook City. That is some indication that the projectors are somewhat in the dark as to where the volume of trade is centered. But then as long as we have water to carry on our commerce from this city the railroad must come to this city if it ever expects to head this off and secure the business of the south end of the county as well.

We all remember that railroad procrastination some time ago predicted that Tillamook county would have railroad connection before this. The Portland, Nehalem & Tillamook Railroad Company has hobbled up again and it makes the surprising statement that work is to be commenced in 60 days. Well, we shall not be kept in suspense very long, anyway. In another page will be found the president's message, so without any comment, we will allow our readers to draw their own conclusions.

If you send political bunco men or tin horn gamblers or their henchmen as delegates to the republican county convention you will get that class of men for county officials. Make your choice, gentlemen, you're the doctors. But did it ever occur to you that of our present county officers those who do not belong to the gambling faction have made first class honest, straightforward, and dignified officials, which cannot be said of the county officials who belong and are identified with the gamblers. We do not think the republican party of this county is wanting to turn the court house into a gambling joint with dealers of stud poker or 21 at the head of each department, do you? And that reason is not best to retain the best officials who want renomination and turn down those who have proved unsatisfactory?

Who's going to boss Tillamook city? That appears to be a question which the city council will have to confront before long, for it was plain on Monday evening that trouble is brewing in that direction. As we said before, the city dads are fairly up against it, for these reasons: They will either have to stand back of the recent ordinances they unanimously passed and enforce them, or back down and take water, and thereby admit that the other fellows, not the representatives of the people, are bossing Tillamook city. We hope, however, that no friction will ensue, but as business men the city dads must take a stand what they consider is for the best interest of the city as a whole, and not pandering to a silent partner of one interest more than another. It is an injustice to arrest, fine and imprison a person for violating one ordinance and to allow another person to violate other ordinances with impunity. This is the reputation the city has, and it remains to be seen whether the city council intends this partiality and injustice to continue.

Ex-Senator J. W. Maxwell is the most inconsistent politician in Tillamook. It was only a few weeks since that he told us, in the presence of Henry Leach, that he was not an aspirant for joint representative. But it beats the band low he is hustling to get it. Probably his political friend, Joe Simon, has persuaded him to do so, and that the little Simon pure senator has also told him there is a political sack, and as that has always proved a most convincing chain to Maxwell, it is not surprising that his first lieutenant, the republican who bolted the republican party and took the stump for Penoyer, is doing the grooming. Every dairyman knows the difference between chalk and cheese, and there is that much difference between Maxwell and Eddy when it comes to intelligence and ability, for it is admitted that Maxwell has not the education or the ability for a legislator.

We feel sorry for Mr Maxwell on this account, and as he has again undertaken to defeat the best representative Tillamook county ever had in the state legislature, he has put himself in antagonism not only with the best interests of Tillamook county but the young and progressive element in the republican party of this county, which is opposed to trading and slate making and Simon's hoodle system in politics, of whom Mr. Maxwell has been the willing tool.

The HEADLIGHT is in favor of a county high school, but whether the majority of the taxpayers are in favor of it we feel somewhat doubtful, for the reason that they consider that taxes are now too high and are opposed to having them increased, even though they would like to have a county high school. This is a legitimate and sound reason, and the opinions of those who entertain these views are deserving of respect and consideration. Some even contend that it would be wise to wait a few years. This matter of a county high school, as well as better roads and more bridges, brings us back to what the HEADLIGHT has repeatedly advocated, that of raising the assessment on timber lands, which will give the county plenty of revenue and would not be as burdensome to the resident taxpayers. This is the situation today, and we think that a large proportion of the people will coincide with us, that we are beginning to tax to death those who reside here and are improving and developing the county commercially and financially, while the speculator, the man who never interests himself to improve the county and is a non-resident, is left off with a nominal tax compared with those who reside here. Probably, now that taxes are increasing every year, a sentiment will be created to assess timber lands higher, and when this is done the problem of a county high school will be much easier solved, as well as better roads and more bridges. A county high school is something every citizen should feel interested in, for it is something that Tillamook county will not be complete without, but the question is, is the time ripe to move in the matter or is it a little premature and ahead of public sentiment.

When To Let Go.

One of the lessons that every person is compelled to learn is, not to cling to an investment too long. It is a great deal worse than not to cling long enough. Most people want to get every cent there is in a foot of land and so they hold until after the drop, then they pay taxes and loose interest on their money invested, for another ten years, until property has slowly crawled back to its par.

Why not move while the market is open, draw your money and make it earn something for you. Money, when properly handled, can always assure you from eight per cent up. Then why bury it in a tax eating block of timber.—"C." BEN RIESLAND.

Communication.

[TO EDITOR OF TILLAMOOK HEADLIGHT.]

DEAR SIR.—I would like to occupy a short space in your columns, in answer to the article Mr. Charles Pye had in your two last issues. I will say that I didn't tell Mr. Pye to shoot my cow. I don't think Mr. Pye would make even an alleged butcher when he would go out, shoot an animal down, then put his cows in the barn, go up to Mr. Robert Brown's, asked him if he would come for a favor on him to go up to Mr. P. D. Newell's phone and tell me he had shot my cow, and for me to come and take care of the meat, went back to his house, got a lantern and knife, started out to stick the cow, and she wasn't there. I got there with my boat and rigging, and Mr. Marion Butts to help me. The first thing I saw, was my cow running around. The next day she could not be found. When I went to Mr. Pye and told him about the cow nine or ten days after she was shot, and told him the best way for him was to take the cow and everything would be settled. This he would not do. After I had started off, he said: "If you want a whole and not a pointer to a silent partner of one interest more than another. It is an injustice to arrest, fine and imprison a person for violating one ordinance and to allow another person to violate other ordinances with impunity. This is the reputation the city has, and it remains to be seen whether the city council intends this partiality and injustice to continue."

Mr. Pye said that I had no slaughter house. This is true. But one thing is not true, that I shoot down my cattle wherever I find them, because I butcher all my cattle opposite town, except three head and one of them I roped. I take notice that Mr. Pye does not say anything about hamstringing an animal for Charlie Eason and having to pay for her and a number of other things that could be mentioned.

Respectfully Yours,
W. N. REDDAWAY.

18,000 Homeless.

New York, March 4.—Flood conditions in the East are reported rapidly improving, although affairs in the Wyoming Valley and Northeastern Pennsylvania generally, and along the Hudson, near Albany, are still in bad shape.

Dispatches from Wilkesbarre, Pa., show that more than a score of lives were lost and $5,000,000 worth of property was destroyed in North-eastern Pennsylvania. The danger is over, but the full extent of the danger is yet to be seen. Eighteen thousand homeless persons in the Wyoming Valley are anxiously watching the backward course of the waters.

Too much housework wrecks women's nerves. And the constant care of children, day and night, is often too trying for even a strong woman. I am so glad that your Wine of Cardui has helped me. I am feeling better than I have felt for years. I am doing my own work without any help, and I washed last week and was not one bit tired. That shows that the Wine is doing me good. I am getting fatter than I ever was before, and sleep good and eat hearty. Before I began taking Wine of Cardui, I used to have to lay down five or six times every day, but now I do not think of lying down through the day.

The Teacher.

[EDITOR OF THE TILLAMOOK HEADLIGHT.]

The first thing to be considered in this subject is:

What is correct teaching?

Teaching is in every sense "an art of the highest order," cultivating both the memory and reasoning faculty of the pupil; guiding him in those exercises that will best develop his powers and leading him to love "humanity, nature, books."

Second.—What are the requirements of the teacher?

The teacher is the soul of the school and should be a conscientious person of true principles, exalted impulses and an unblemished character.

He must have a steadfastness that will yield to no obstacles, and must be progressive. The teacher needs learning for he cannot teach correctly what he does not know thoroughly. He should be a student in order that he may best understand his pupils' difficulties in mastering different subjects and also keep his own mind receptive of truth.

He should have control of himself, for without that he will fail in governing his school and good government is one of the very first requisites to good teaching.

Third.—Who is a successful teacher? He who is quick and earnest in speech and action, and has order in all lines of his work.

He who reads and studies "everything and anything" which will add to his knowledge, help him in his work and make him better fitted to fill his position.

He who is able to find out the surest, shortest and most attractive way of making his instructions reach the minds and hearts of his pupils.

The greatest thing we can do for a boy or girl is not to impart to them facts alone, but to give them impressions that will build their character for life.

The successful teacher never "dampens the enthusiasm" of his pupils. He throws his whole soul into the work and does his very best to make his school better and the lives of the scholars better.

He will feel that while he is educating himself as well; and will not be a mere "reciting post" of no more value than a "Chinese Prayer machine."

A necessary condition of success is a strong, determined purpose. Thought and genius do some things, and wealth and education prepared the way, they cannot take its place.

He knows that a great deal may be done by means of methods and devices, but example accomplishes infinitely more; therefore he will be and is that which he wishes his pupils to be.

Fourth.—The influence of the teacher, however, is greatly determined by the influence of the teacher's influence. What a power the tidy, cheerful teacher has toward making a cheerful wide-awake school. "That teacher who knows how to keep a brave heart, how to be hopeful in spirit and cheerful in manner, how to make rainbows when the light shines through tears given to her children an immeasurable good in simply living this philosophy of life before them." It is the teacher's neat and tasteful in his or her appearance it is most likely to be reflected in the improved dress of the pupils. Don't wear old unbecoming clothes when by using a little time and ingenuity they may be altered so as to be better altered to your style.

I recall an amusing story told by a prof. at one of our Teachers' Institutes. He stated how the pupils in a certain school knew when the teacher was likely to treat them justly or unfairly. If she came to school in her plain, old, brown dress with her hair combed straight back and twisted in a tight knot—"look out for her."

If her braids were curled and she wore a pretty dress they were safe in predicting a pleasant day for all parties.

"How to dress" is not a society problem alone but a question to be thought out by every school-room worker.

We, as teachers have a great responsibility resting on our shoulders, that of training children who in a few short years will "rule or ruin."
